LONDON PROPOSALS NO ULTIMATUM

BRITAIN WOULD COMPROMISE BUT HITLER MUST CO-OPERATE

BERLIN REPLY LIKELY TO BE SENT TO-DAY

London, March 23.

The proposals sent to Germany by the Locarno Powers, designed to surmount the crisis which has arisen by the unilateral denunciation of the Locarno and Versailles Pacts by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, were not intended as an ultimatum, declared Lord Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, speaking at Bristol to-day.

"We want no encirclement of Germany and no exclusive alliances, but a European partnership in which Germany will freely join."

"We have asked Germany a hard thing; but Germany had created conditions by which the stability of Europe was shaken and it was not too much to ask that Germany make a contribution of admitted difficulty," he said.

"I have read the press reports that Germany will not be able to accept at least one of the proposals addressed to her by the Locarno Powers, but as far as the British Government is concerned any serious counter-proposals would be received with the most careful and anxious consideration."—Reuter.

Leaving To-day

Berlin, Mar. 23.

Herr von Ribbentrop, the German chief delegate to the League of Nations Council conference in London, is returning to the British capital by plane on Tuesday.

This announcement indicates that Chancellor Adolf Hitler's consultations with his advisers are ending and that the German reply to the Locarno Powers' proposals for the safeguarding of the Western European peace, has been prepared and will be delivered in London by Herr von Ribbentrop.

To-night, Herr Hitler was still working on the details of his reply to the Locarno Powers.

But despite the water of rumour, not a single definite fact has leaked out with regard to Herr Hitler's intentions.

Diplomatic circles adhere to the belief that his reply will likely be firm, but conciliatory.—Reuter.

London, Mar. 23.

Questioned in the House of Commons on the European situation, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, stated that in the course of his conversations with Herr von Ribbentrop he had emphasized the sanctity of the documents which had been communicated to him were in the nature of proposals.

"I made it clear His Majesty's Government hoped the German Government would be in a position to accept them, but that in any event His Majesty's Government felt the German Government should assist them in their task by making some constructive contribution to improve the situation."

"On my instructions, His Majesty's Ambassador in Berlin used similar language in an interview with the German Minister for Foreign Affairs yesterday."

Mr. Eden added that no reply had yet been received from the German Government.

Answering another question, the Prime Minister said the maintenance of the principle of sanctity of treaties was the main objective of the British Government.—British Wireless.

Peace Britain's Aim

London, March 23.

Lord Halifax, who was one of the British delegates in the Four Power discussions both in Paris and London, deputised for Mr. Anthony Eden at a meeting at Bristol to-night. He expressed the opinion that it has been single desire of the whole country in the recent crisis to use its full influence for the preservation of European peace, and to build this peace upon the only possible foundations, namely, respect for treaties freely made, and mutual understanding. That, he asserted, put in the (Continued on Page 5.)

EPIDEMICS FOLLOW FLOODS

FOURTEEN STATES MOBILISING

PROBLEM OF REFUGEES

(Special To "Telegraph")

Washington, Mar. 23.

The health forces of fourteen states have mobilised all their resources to halt the incipient epidemics of typhoid, scarlet fever and pneumonia which are breaking out in communities of Maine and Kentucky in the wake of the disastrous floods which have already taken a toll of nearly 200 lives.

All but a few of the flooded rivers are receding from their destructive levels.

The present problem is to feed and house 200,000 refugees, who have lost everything in the floods, and to prevent the spread of disease.

The militia is enforcing quarantines in Connecticut and Pennsylvania. The sale of raw milk is forbidden in Pennsylvania and West Virginia flood areas.

At Wheeling the restaurants have been forbidden to re-open, pending inspections.—United Press.

NEW ZEPPELIN'S FLIGHT

SOON TO LEAVE FOR RIO DE JANEIRO

Berlin, Mar. 23.

The new Zeppelin Hindenburg is to fly to Rio de Janeiro on March 30. The giant airship flew over Berlin to-day on a trial flight lasting five hours. She carried a hundred passengers.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

During the week-end one case each of Diphtheria and Typhoid were reported to the local Health authorities.

LINCOLNSHIRE ENTRIES GO TO POST TO-MORROW

London, Mar. 23.

The Lincoln flat racing season opened to-day in dull but mild weather on the perfect Carlisle track, where the Lincolnshire Handicap will be run on Wednesday.

A record field is expected, as there are thirty-nine probable starters. Owing to the terrible winter, trainers have had little chance of getting their horses fit, however.

Overcast, which finished fourth last year, is regarded as an excellent chance, since he has been trained on the sands nearby, and the trainer, Russell, hopes to repeat the victory.

BANKS AID GERMANY'S SHIPPING

LARGE DEBTS WRITTEN OFF

Berlin, March 23.

Plans for the financial reorganisation of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg-America shipping companies will be decided upon at extraordinary general meetings on April 23 and April 24, respectively.

The share capital of the North German Lloyd company will probably be reduced by 42,000,000 marks, and the sum written off with part of the reserve used to balance the company's loss. The capital will then be raised again 40,000,000 marks.

Similarly the capital of the Hamburg-America line is expected to be reduced from 57,500,000 marks to 12,010,000 marks, and then raised back to 46,370,000 marks.

It is believed the creditor banks have written off a considerable part of the capital which the companies owe them, to enable the carrying out of the proposed reorganisation.—Reuter Special.

LADY RESIDENT'S DEATH

MRS. EGGE PASSES IN HOSPITAL

The death occurred at the French Hospital at 2.30 this morning of Mrs. Polignac E. Egge, after an illness of about a month. She had resided in the Colony for fourteen years.

The deceased, who was 55 years of age, was the wife of Mr. W. Egge, manager of Messrs. Kunst and Albers, Peddler Building, for whom much sympathy will be felt.

The funeral takes place this afternoon, passing the Monument, Happy Valley, at 5.15 p.m. Prior to the interment a Russian Orthodox service will be held in the cemetery.

FAMOUS ACTOR PASSES

MR. OSCAR ASHE'S NOTABLE CAREER

London, Mar. 23.

The death has occurred of Mr. Oscar Ashe, the noted actor-manager. —Reuter.

Oscar Ashe was born at Geelong, Victoria, Australia, in June, 1872, and was educated at Melbourne Grammar School. A Norwegian by descent he studied for the stage at Oslo (Christiania). His first appearance was made at the Opera Comique, London, in March, 1893, in "Man and Woman." He then joined the Bensons and was with them for eight years playing in Shakespeare and costume comedies. He next played Maldonado in Pinero's "The Sign of the Cross" in 1902. In that year he joined Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's, appearing in Shakespeare.

With Otto Stuart he took over the management of the Adelphi in 1904 and in the close of the year he and his wife Miss Lily Branson whom he had met and married while with the Bensons, gave a Shakespearean season. In 1907 he moved to His Majesty's where he produced Binyon's "Attila" and Shakespeare.

FIRST EASTERN PLAY

In 1900 he toured in Australia. Returning to London in 1911, he appeared as Hamlet in "Hamlet" the first of the Eastern plays which he put on, and it brought a profit of £20,000. In 1912-3 he again visited Australia and then South Africa. On his return in 1914 he revived "Hamlet" and in September put on "Hamlet" which he had adapted. His first appearance on the variety stage was at Newcastle in 1915.

In August 1916, the run began of the spectacular Eastern musical play "Chu Chin Chow" written by himself in which he appeared as Abu Hassan. This piece, which cost £5,000 to produce, employed the world's record run of five years (2,238 performances) and was seen by nearly 3,000,000 people. The takings were over £750,000 and the net profit is said to have been about £200,000, while the film and musical rights were sold for £25,000.

Nevertheless a receiving order was made against him on May 28 1920, for the success which he scored with "Chu Chin Chow" did not attend his later ventures. In 1920 he put on "Mecene" and in 1921 "Cairo" but these had not the drawing power of their predecessor. Other plays in- (Continued on Page 5.)

AGREE TO REFUSE SANCTIONS

THREE-CORNERED AGREEMENT SIGNED AT ROME

Rome, Mar. 23.

An agreement not to apply sanctions against Germany in the event of the League of Nations decreeing them, is believed to be one of the terms embodied in the pact between Italy, Austria and Hungary, which was signed to-day by the representatives of the three Governments meeting in Rome.

It is also understood that the Pact expresses the determination to maintain the independence of Austria and invites the adhesion of other powers to the agreement, apparently with the intention of enabling Austria to collaborate more closely with her neighbour, Czechoslovakia.

The economic side of the protocols express the determination of three countries concerned to increase trade to the mutual advantage of each.

The full terms of the pact will be published to-morrow.—Reuter.

VICTORY KISSING OUR FLAG

IL DUCE'S MESSAGE TO NATION

SEES END OF SANCTIONS

Rome, Mar. 23.

Signor Benito Mussolini, Italian Dictator, spoke to a crowd in front of his official residence to-day, declaring that the dark clouds which had been hanging over Italy would soon disappear.

This is taken as an intimation that the Dictator expects an end of the League of Nations' sanctions and of hostilities in Ethiopia.

"Victory is kissing our flag in East Africa. The territory our soldiers are conquering is already consecrated to our nation," Signor Mussolini asserted.

He was evidently referring to the League of Nations Covenant, under which sanctions were applied, when he said:

"The vital progress of the Italian people has never been halted by the legalistic pact which, instead of promoting peace, threatens humanity with even vaster wars."—United Press.

LEAGUE MEETING

London, Mar. 23.

The League's Committee of thirteen met in London to-day to consider the Ethiopian and Italian replies to the Committee's appeal for negotiations on March 3.

The Committee decided to endeavour to bring the parties together in order to obtain within the framework and in the spirit of the Covenant, a prompt cessation of hostilities and a definite re-establishment of peace.

The Committee also decided to submit the protest of the Ethiopian Government against the use by Italy of poison gas for observations on the Italian Government.—British Wireless.

QUEEN MARY TO LEAVE CLYDE

Glasgow, Mar. 23.

The giant liner, Queen Mary, will leave the Clyde to-morrow on a journey of twenty-seven miles down the river.

It is expected that the journey will take three hours, owing to the awkward bends in the river.

The gross tonnage of the liner was officially disclosed to-day for the first time as being 80,773 tons.

The French liner, Normandie, in consequence of recent structural additions is now stated to be 82,000 tons gross.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

ETHIOPIANS URGE ARMED LEAGUE AID

FRESH APPEAL TO POWERS

PROTEST AGAINST USE OF POISON GAS

London, Mar. 23.

The Ethiopian Government has sent a second note to the League of Nations protesting against the use of poison gas by the Italian troops invading Ethiopian territory, and appeals to the League for immediate assistance.

The note states that for fifteen months Ethiopia has been appealing to the League for intervention in one way or another, but no answer has been given.

Now Ethiopia is again appealing, it goes on, under Article XVI of the League Covenant, which calls, first, for effective forms of sanctions, and second, for a combined League of Nations Army to come to the assistance of the beleaguered state, suffering at the hands of a nation which the League has declared to be an aggressor.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

BOMBERS ACTIVE

Rome, Mar. 23.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's communique, received from his field headquarters in Ethiopia to-day, does not mention the reported Ethiopian counter-attack on the northern front, which according to Addis Ababa reports, has met with pronounced success and is personally directed by the Emperor Haile Selassie.

The Italian communique claims that four Ethiopian aircraft have been destroyed in the last four days.

It asserts that the bombing attack on Jijiga, reported yesterday, resulted in the destruction of supplies, magazines and depots.

The organisation of the Italian Army's supply system continues as far as the most advanced lines. A bridge 110 metres long over the Takazze River has been completed.

It is officially denied that Italian aeroplanes bombed a British ambulance at Jijiga.—Reuter Special.

JIJIGA CASUALTIES

Harrar, Mar. 23.

It is officially stated that fifteen persons were killed during the Italian bombing attack on Jijiga. Four of the 83 wounded have since died.

The wounded include several Arabs who are British subjects.—Reuter Special.

Lost! 22 lbs. of FAT

Safe, Easy Way

Young lady jubilant—lost 22 lbs. 5 1/2 inches—lost 4 inches. Feels, Oh, so light and full of pep.

Suppose you weighed 174 lbs., and every time you looked in a mirror, there almost came as you gazed on a double chin, heavy arms and legs, large hips and bust.

And suppose this over-fat condition made you too heavy for your own feet—until you felt constantly all dragged out, stomach aching with gas and indigestion and dreadful dizziness, sick headaches.

And then you tried one thing after another—and you're all ready to despair.

Such was the dilemma of Mrs. C. H. Blackburn, Lorain, Ohio U.S.A. She read about Hunkers, the one safe, natural way to take off excess pounds by cleansing water from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. But let her tell her story:

"Past disappointments naturally made me skeptical, but it's lucky for me that I finally did take Hunkers. With the first bottle, the dizziness, sick headaches, indigestion and constipation disappeared. What a relief. Keeping on with the treatment—the first thing I knew my dresses were getting loose—when I had used seven bottles I stopped. I was a different person. On the scale and in, and behold, I had lost 22 lbs.—from 174 to 152 lbs. In a pleasant, easy way. I really feel like a different person."

You may not want to lose 22 pounds. But if you have excess fat, you can lose it in the famous "easy" way, as shown in this picture. Each day for the next week, take a little Hunkers, the new treatment. No need to starve. Eat as much as you want. The

MRS. KENNY LEADS IN "MATERNITY MARATHON"

Toronto, Mar. 15. Despite the fact her latest child died soon after birth, Mrs. Matthew Kenny is leading Toronto's "Maternity Sweepstakes" with a prize of US $500,000 waiting for her in October.

The strange will of Charles Vance Millar, awarding $500,000 to the Toronto woman who had the most children between October, 1926 and October, 1936, did not specify that the children must live. All that is required is that their births be registered.

The son born to Mrs. Kenny was her tenth child since October, 1926. She refused advice of physicians that she go to a hospital and remained in her small frame house here. The child weighed six and a half pounds at birth and apparently was healthy, but died about an hour after being born.

The birth put Mrs. Kenny once child ahead of Mrs. Grace Bagnato, who has had nine children since 1926 and a total of 20 since she was married. Mrs. John Nagle, wife of an unemployed carpenter, also has had nine children since 1926, but there is doubt whether all of them were born in Toronto.

Millar's will specified that all of the children must be born in Toronto.

Mrs. Kenny is 32, and less than five feet tall. Married at the age of 16, the slender, delicate woman has had a total of 16 children. She was particularly saddened by the death of her latest son because she had intended naming him for Millar.

"I am sure we will win all that money anyway," she said. "Millar's friends and business associates believe he was playing a practical joke when he made a will offering a prize for a maternity race. The document was legal, however, and already the executors of his estate are converting bonds and other assets into cash in preparation for the pay-off."

The Maternity Sweepstakes wasn't the only idea Millar had. He earned a vast fortune in gold and silver mines and when he died in 1926 it was found his will had other provisions.

He willed brewery stock to every Protestant minister in Toronto; he

GODLESS LEADER'S GLOOM

40,000 VILLAGE CHURCHES

Moscow, Mar. 6. DESPITE years of effort on the part of the Godless Society, religion is still holding on in Russia.

Yaroslavsky, a veteran Bolshevik and president of the society, admitted this to-night at a meeting celebrating its tenth anniversary. About half of the population of the Soviet is still religious, he declared. Of the members of the collective farms 34 per cent., and a still larger percentage of the individual peasantry still cling to the old religious beliefs, he continued. Churches are still open in 40,000 villages.

"The young people are with us," he said, "but it is the older people we must win away from religion."

PARACHUTIST'S BOAST

Yaroslavsky called for a redoubled effort to uproot the last remnants of religion from the country.

Following his address, Basil Liva, head of the women's division of the Young Communist League, declared, "My children will know God only as a word in the dictionary."

Nina Kamneva, a young blonde girl parachute jumper, who holds the world record for delayed jumps, declared, amid laughter, as she left the meeting, "I have flown high in the air, made many jumps, and I never saw any God or angels."

PRAYERS ON THE FARMS

The Hall of Columns, which was a nobleman's club, in pre-revolution days, was crowded with 2,000 delegates from all parts of the Soviet Union, representing 5,000,000 members of the Godless Society, who, with ringing sound, promised to continue the drive to liquidate religion in the country.

The hall was decorated with anti-religious posters, including a huge photograph of Jewish members on the collective farms praying hard.

CHINESE SWORD IN WOUNDING CHARGE

A Chinese sword was produced at Old-street Police Court one day last month, when Harry Gold, aged 32, of Butler-street, Shore-ditch, was charged on remand with maliciously wounding Ernest Williams by striking him with the sword. He was charged further with being armed with a felonious weapon with intent to commit a felonious act.

Both charges were dismissed, but Gold was bound over for 12 months to keep the peace.

A police-constable said that he saw Williams outside a public-house, pointing to Gold. He said: "This man has just wounded me with a sword."

When Gold was told he would be arrested, said the constable, he replied: "I had the sword to defend myself, as I thought they were going to do for me."

MYSTERY OF EASTER ISLAND SOLVED?

Honolulu, Mar. 16. The "mystery" of Easter Island's colossal statues and the origin of its inhabitants has been lifted through matter-of-fact archaeological research, according to the Pan-Pacific Press bureau.

Dr. Alfred Metraux, French ethnologist who recently joined the staff of Honolulu's Bishop Museum, pointed out that the large statues which have puzzled observers since the first white men visited Easter could have been moved into place by hand.

The statues, Dr. Metraux was quoted as saying, weigh only five or six tons, and could easily have been moved from their local quarries and set in place on the seashore by hand labour. Four hundred men could drag them with ropes of native weaving.

As to the population of the island, which—often has been described as the remnant of the people of a "lost continent," Dr. Metraux advanced a theory of environmental modification of races common to the South Seas.

He suggested the Easter Islanders are related to the Maori of New Zealand and other Polynesians. According to his calculations, based on observation of variations in customs, he calculated they arrived on the island about the Twelfth century. Once established, he said, a lack of timber coupled with an abundance of soft rock, easily carved, modified their culture.

The Easter Island script on wooden tablets which has long interested scientists and aroused considerable speculation was described by Dr. Metraux as not a true writing language, but more likely a memory aid to assist in reciting tribal sacred legends.

Dr. Metraux visited Easter Island last year as a representative of the Paris Museum of Ethnology, with an expedition aboard the Belgian training ship Mercator. He joined the Bishop Museum, he said, for the advantages it offered in studying archaeological and ethnological history of the Pacific.—United Press.

50 LUXURY LINERS FOR BRITAIN

BIG BID FOR REAL SEA SUPREMACY

London, Mar. 15. British shipping companies are set to spend £30,000,000 in the next two years on a fleet of fifty luxury liners to span the trade routes of the British Empire.

These do not include the sister ship to the giant "Queen Mary" which the Cunard-White Star is already tentatively planning to build, and two or three smaller faster ships which are reportedly under consideration to maintain a subsidiary service to the Queen Mary.

The first of the new fleet—the 25,100-ton Union Castle streamlined luxurious Motor Liner "Stirling Castle", largest motor vessel ever built in British shipyards—has just sailed from Southampton on her maiden voyage to the Cape of Good Hope.

In the shipbuilding yards at the Clyde, where the Queen Mary was constructed, two steamers for the Bombay service and a fruit-carrying passenger motor ship for Jamaica are presently nearing construction. On the Tyne, a passenger and fruit-carrier motor ship and a similar vessel for South Africa are on the stocks. The 24,000-ton Orient passenger steamer "Orizaba" is also being built at Barrow-in-Furness.

Belfast, until recently one of the hardest hit of all shipbuilding centres in Great Britain, is constructing eight passenger vessels for Empire routes. These include the 25,000-ton Athlone Castle for the South African run of the Union Castle line; two passenger and cargo motor ships for the Union Castle's Round-Africa services of 15,000 tons apiece; an 11,000-ton motor ship for an Australian company; and a 10,000-ton cargo and passenger motor ship for the Lamport and Holt service. It is reported that the keels of other ships will also be laid in the near future.—United Press.

£10,000,000 ARMAMENTS ORDER

ROUMANIA'S CONTRACT WITH FRANCE

Paris, Mar. 6. ROUMANIA has ordered armaments worth nearly £10,000,000 in France, according to a Bukarest message to the Agence Economique et Financiere explaining the Franco-Roumanian trade and financial agreement recently signed in Paris.

The principal aim of the treaty is to provide Roumania with sufficient francs to pay for the armaments, the interest on Roumanian loans issued on the Paris market, overdue instalments of commercial debts, and for other needs.

To facilitate transfer Roumania has consented to hand over to a French group for 12 years three-quarters of the State levy in kind on Roumanian petroleum. This guarantee is estimated to be worth from 90 to 100 million francs a year.

The contract for the sale of this levy has not yet been completed. It is to be signed in Bukarest before April 1.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

The trade and financial agreements, which will come into force only when the contract has been signed, provides that if Roumania finds financial resources to cover her armaments order, she can pay for these in three years, and thus regain free possession of the ceded portion of the petroleum levy.

The French Government had granted Roumania a small increase in import quotas for maize, barley, and certain dried vegetables.

In addition, France undertakes to buy from Roumania a quantity of petrol for aviation.

There are also certain adjustments with regard to commercial payments. Cash payment for French goods are reduced from 50 to 45 per cent. of their value, and payment on sums overdue from 10 to 5 per cent. Foreign currencies at the free disposal of Roumania are increased from 40 to 50 per cent. Those various measures will procure another 20 to 22 million francs per annum.—Reuter.

WORLD'S BAGPIPE CHAMPION

Headmaster Sent To Prison

He Tells Judge Of Experiment At Hotel

A HEADMASTER was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment at the Old Bailey this month for offences concerning boys.

The man, Stanley Charles Beresford, aged forty-two, was formerly headmaster of St. Augustine's College, Walton-on-Thames, which he founded in September, 1934.

The school was closed last December. Beresford pleaded not guilty to charges concerning four boys.

Mr. Laurence Vine, prosecuting, said the charges could conveniently be divided into three groups, all referring to boys less than sixteen years of age.

The first three charges related to a boy of ten, who, according to the prosecution, was taken by Beresford in a car to an hotel at East Grinstead.

Beresford signed the register "The Hon. C. B. Beresford and son."

The second group referred to incidents which, it was alleged, occurred in the dormitory of the school itself.

The third group concerned a boy at an hotel at Westcliff-on-Sea.

Beresford, in the witness-box, declared that he took one of the boys to the hotel at Westcliff because he wanted to prove that he could take a poor boy of elementary education for about three months and completely alter his outlook on life.

"FREEDOM"

Of his school, he said: "I believed in giving boys freedom and establishing a friendly relationship between masters and boys."

Beresford was found guilty of offences at East Grinstead and Westcliff and not guilty of offences at the school.

Judge Dodson, passing sentence, said the jury had tried to give Beresford the benefit of any possible doubt.

"The offences of which you have been found guilty are most grave because they affect the youth, and the youth of to-day is the manhood of to-morrow, on whom the responsibilities of citizenship rest," said the judge.

"It adds to the gravity of the case that you were supposed to be the guardian and guide."

At the recent bagpipe championships of England and Scotland the girl shown above, Sheila McKey, was elected world's champion girl bagpipe player. She is showing a compatriot some of the 700 prizes she has won.

GIRL RENOUNCES STAGE FAME FOR FORTUNE

FILMS AND RADIO BANNED, TOO

"OLD FASHIONED FATHER'S" DEATHBED WISH

BEAUTIFUL 21-years-old Betty Steele, of Belmont, Surrey—given the choice by her dying father—has decided to share a £64,000 fortune rather than seek fame on the stage.

Her father's ban extends to films, broadcasting, and the making of gramophone records.

"I have no intention of going on the stage—absolutely none," Miss Steele said.

"At school I had an interest in amateur theatricals and appeared occasionally," she went on.

"But it was only a passing fancy; gone for ever now."

GIRLISH BOAST

But up to the time of his death, Mr. Charles R. Steele, senior partner of Francis Miller and Steele, old-established solicitors of Finsbury-square, E.C., remembered his daughter's girlish ambition. Her enthusiastic boast, four years ago—"One day I am going to be a great stage star"—worried him to the day of his death.

"Father was very old-fashioned in his views on these things," Miss Steele declared. "He wished to be sure that my early interest in the stage would not be revived."

One of Mr. Steele's last actions was to add this codicil to his will:

"Should she give, in public, any performance by way of acting, singing, dancing, playing any musical instrument or giving any performance with a view to its being broadcast or reproduced by cinematograph or gramophone process, the life interest given to her shall cease at the time of her death."

Mr. A. Leslie Smith, partner in the firm of Francis Miller and Steele, stated that Betty's father "did not think it was suitable livelihood for her. The provisions of the will were legally enforceable."

The late Mr. Steele was 78 years of age when he died last January. He left the whole of his fortune to his four children.

CEMETERY CHAPEL AS "REVOLTING" HORROR

Dean Says It Is Only Fit for the Burial of an Ass

A REMARKABLE attack on the local cemetery chapel is made by the Dean of Bocking (Essex), the Very Rev. Edgar Rogers.

Writing in his magazine, he says:

"It has been, I confess, a surprise to me to find how rarely the bodies of the faithful departed are brought to church on the way to burial—used as I have been in other parishes to that most Christian custom. I grieve that it is not usual in Bocking, and I grieve the more because the cemetery chapel is wholly unsuitable for any Christian rite."

"It is ugly, devoid of any sort of Christian symbol or propriety which can suggest that glory of our faith—the Resurrection of the Dead. I say deliberately it is, in my opinion, an offence to any decent Christian feeling, an insult to the departed, a needless aggravation of any mourner's grief and utterly unworthy of any community which cares for the honour and glory of God."

"It might be, as so many cemetery chapels are throughout the country, a shrine of comfort and peace, where not only on the day of a burial the hearts of mourners might be uplifted and the dreadful sorrow of bereavement eased, but all day and every day a tender and sacred spot, where prayer and recollection could unite the living and the dead."

"As it is, in its hideous and revolting horror, it adds to suffering and offers no more reverence than we would give to 'the burial of an ass.'"

"It is utterly repellent and hateful. There is no need for such disgrace. The cost of making it decent would be infinitesimal—a halfpenny or a penny on the rates for one single half year would be sufficient—a very little more would make it a holy place of beauty and comfort. The powers-that-be need not fear that such expenditure would expose them to criticism."

Undertakers' Charges

"Meanwhile, we urge that the bodies of Church people, reverencing as we do those bodies because 'The Word was made flesh, should always be brought to church and the heathen chapel at the cemetery avoided."

"I am told that some undertakers charge more if the body is taken to church. Very well, as a practical matter, patronise those firms who don't, and let us all make a determined set against the sheer indecency of the present cemetery chapel."

Does Not Agree

Mr. C. J. Baker, chairman of the Braintree and Bocking Council cemetery committee, when told of the Dean's criticism, said:

"I do not wish to enter into any controversy with the Dean, but I certainly do not agree with him. I take the view that if there is any complaint to be made it should be made either to my committee or to the council."

"The chapel in question is an old building and dates back to the days of burial boards."

Mr. Rogers, who has been Dean of Bocking since 1931, said: "Complaint has already been made. The Bishop of Chelmsford raised the matter with the council two years ago, but nothing has been done."

Iron Lung Has Kept Him Alive

San Francisco, Mar. 15. ONE of the most remarkable scientific experiments of all time is drawing to an unsuccessful close in Alameda County Hospital, California.

In April 1934 eighteen-year-old Raymond Rambo, suffering from infantile paralysis, was given up for dead. In a last effort to prolong his life doctors placed him in an "iron lung."

For 690 days a clanking respirator has pumped life-giving breath into young Raymond's wasted body.

Now his strength is diminishing as a result of acute stomach cramps, and the doctors have little hope of further prolonging his artificial life.

Animal Goliath Conquered By A David

Denver, Colo., Mar. 10. Posagawagme, Colo., Mar. 10. A David of the animal world is strutting around boasting of his conquest of a Goliath.

Frank C. Miller, owner of Trail's End ranch, 40 miles north of Fort Collins, Colo., on the Cache La Poudre river, told of the unexpected end of Posagawagme, better known as Poss, leader of the buffalo herd maintained on the huge ranch.

Poss won leadership of the herd in 1931, after years of apprenticeship, by killing Shorty, erstwhile chief.

Since that time Poss killed, in combat, three pretenders to the throne, two bull elk and two deer, besides an unknown number of smaller animals.

But recently Miller said he found Poss' body lying in the snow.

A postmortem examination was made and it was discovered that the "killer" had fallen victim to one of the most insignificant members of the animal kingdom, a porcupine.—United Press.

CHILDLESS WIFE'S TRAGIC DEVOTION

"Thought She Was A Drag"

Northwood Hills (Middlesex), Mar. 1. A YOUNG Congregational minister from Birmingham told, in the West Middlesex coroner's court here today, a tragic story of his wife's devotion and her longing for children she could never have.

The Rev. Herbert Alfred Hamilton, now living at Uphill-Road, Mill Hill, described how four days ago he found his wife—fair haired, twenty-six-years old Mrs. Alice Winifred Hamilton, lying dead in front of a burning electric fire in an empty house in Joel-street, Northwood Hills, where for six months of last year they had lived together.

He said that soon after their marriage six years ago, his wife had an operation which prevented her from having children.

A few months later another operation had to be performed, and three years ago he left Birmingham and came to London to put his wife in the care of a Harley-street specialist. She had been in consultation with him ever since.

The mental strain on her was very severe," Mr. Hamilton explained. "She was very disappointed that she could not have children and also because she thought she was being a drag on me with her illness."

Charlie Gains A Gold Medal

New York, Mar. 15. Charlie Chaplin has been awarded a gold medal by the League of Nations Cinema Committee in recognition of his activities as an international screen figure.

The committee, which represents fifty-three nations, voted the award unanimously. The secretary, notifying Mr. Chaplin, tells him he is "the greatest personality of the art of the cinema."—Reuter.

The coroner asked if Mrs. Hamilton had ever threatened to kill herself.

"She sometimes made threats of a theatrical kind when she was excited and feeling the need of me," Mr. Hamilton explained. "It was an inverted way of saying that she loved me."

Last September they separated—largely on the advice of the specialist. The inquest was adjourned for a month.

CINEMA NOTES

With a burning ambition to become a great dramatic actress, June Lang, who has the leading role in "Every Saturday Night," the new and hilarious Fox comedy-drama of a typical American family, coming on Thursday to the King's Theatre, has made rapid strides towards her goal in a very short space of time. Miss Lang, one of Hollywood's youngest stars, is considered one of the best groomed young women on the screen. Her brown hair and blue eyes, coupled with her fresh beauty, cause her to stand out from the crowd. Shortly after her birth, her parents, left Minneapolis and migrated to Hollywood. Here she completed her education and started the training that she believes will eventually lead her to the realization of her ambition. This ambition is no mere dream with Miss Lang, and she conscientiously nurtures it with constant study and practice of piano and dancing. Miss Lang made her professional debut in a stage production of "Temptations of 1930".
Shortly after, while dancing at the Griffith Theatre in Los Angeles, she was given a screen test at 20th Century Fox, and subsequently placed in the studio training school. Her desire to get ahead combined with her amazing ability and talent was soon recognized and the resources of the studio were placed behind her. From a minor role in "Young Sinners," she soon graduated to ingenue roles in "Chandu the Magician," "The Man Who Dared," "I Loved You Wednesday" and "Music in the Air." In her latest picture, "Every Saturday Night," Miss Lang enacts the role of the eldest daughter of a happy, scrappy family composed of a big brood of step-on-the-gas-kids who make life lively for a horse-and-buggy dad. Appearing in the cast with June Lang are Thomas Beck, Jed
Prouty and Spring Byington.

The drama of a condemned man who escapes and spends his short hours of freedom to get the man who sent him to jail is the main plot of Paramount's "Four Hours to Kill".
The picture is a thriller opening at the Queen's Theatre to-morrow.
Adapted from the current season's hit play "Small Miracle" the picture shows how the lives and tragedies of an audience in a theatre are bound with the fate of an escaped convict.
A clock room boy has stolen money he needs to help his mother who plans to run away with her sweetheart, young lovers hold a secret rendezvous. All these people are in the theatre, and all their problems find some solution when Barthelmee lures his victim to the theatre. Before the technical crew of the audience he shoots him down, then falls before a police revolver himself. Joe Morrison, Helen Mack, Gertrude Michael, Dorothy Tree and Ray Milland are cast in the supporting roles.

"Travelling Saleslady" one of the freedoms and liveliest comedies of the season will be shown at the Queen's Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday with Joan Blondell heading the all-star cast. Women are especially delighted with the picture, for it shows how a young girl with initiative and personality gets the better of her male rivals in the business world. The story is delightfully breezy and whimsical, with hilarious situations and a most unusual climax. The dialogue is snappy and the action swift moving from start to finish.
Joan Blondell, in the title role, is as slim and beautiful and as full of pep and ginger as ever. Her acting is snappy and full of nerve and she handles every situation with skill and artistry. William Gargan plays opposite Miss Blondell. Glenda Farrell appears on the scene as the jealous rival of Miss Blondell. Hugh Herbert has never been funnier than as the inhibited inventor of a toothpaste with cocktail. Grant Mitchell does excellent work as the conservative tooth-paste manufacturer who thinks that women know nothing about business and Al Shean, formerly of Gallagher and Shean, plays the role of the up-to-date manufacturer, with great humour and skill.

"Public Hero Number 1"
Modern as to-day's newspaper headlines, and thrilling as their graphic accounts of the war of the government on organised crime, is "Public Hero Number 1," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's amazing thriller of the work of the secret service, now playing at the Star Theatre. Directed by J. Walter Ruben from a story by himself and Wells Root, it is a thrilling and engrossing cross-section of the work of government operatives, replete with thrills, enriched with a romance and lightened by many comedy interludes. Lionel Barrymore plays the principal character role, in which he demonstrates an amazing facility for comedy, along with drama as the bumbling Dr. Glass, physician-in-ordinary to the cohorts of the underworld. Chester Morris gives what is probably the finest performance of his entire career as the adventurous Jeff Crane, who exposes himself to all sorts of dangers in getting out of perilous close quarters. Also outstanding is the gangster portrayal of Joseph Calleia, who created such a personal hit in the Minden, playing the son, who gives an amazingly human and skilful performance, and Cecelia Parker, charming as the high school sweetheart. Miss MacMahon as Aunt Lilly, and Spring Byington as the mother are ideally cast, and Mickey simplest terms, the very essence of British foreign policy. Referring to the German case, the League Council by Herr Von Ribbentrop's "sine qua non" there was much in it that would command sympathy in many quarters, but whatever sympathy Englishmen might have with the broad outlines of the German case, their constructive respect for law would always make them condemn action taken in direct violation of it.

First Danger Passed

He went on to express understanding of and sympathy with the depth of feelings of anxiety and resentment aroused in Belgium and France by the German action in the demilitarized zone. If, as he believed, the first danger was passed, it was due on the one hand to the restraint of France and Belgium, and on the other, to the untiring efforts of the British Foreign Secretary to secure a better understanding between Germany and Belgium and France, which had resulted in the proposals now before the world. They were not to be regarded as an ultimatum for Germany to accept, but if they were found acceptable by the German Government, in any respect, the German Government was entitled to ask that the German Government should advance other proposals, not less effective, constituting a real contribution by Germany to the cause of settlement which might rank with the contribution of restraint made by Belgium and France and the contribution to security made by the British Government.

The British declaration of complete adherence to the obligations of the Treaty of Locarno, and agreement to practical discussions with Belgium and France in advance of the means by which it might be brought to them in case of unprovoked aggression, had been, he believed a real contribution to the creation of an atmosphere in which discussion could take place and peace be established.—British Wire- less.

Last night's Whist Drive at the European Y.M.C.A. was a record for this year, one hundred and twenty-four people sitting down to play in the West Lounge. The prizes, which were presented by Mrs. Friday, were won by the following players: Ladies' First, Mrs. Spradbery; Ladies' Second, Mrs. Jordan; Ladies' Lowest Score, Mrs. Bowler; Gents' First, Mr. Hamman; Gents' Second, Mr. Jackson; Gents' Lowest Score, Mr. Pollard. A knock-out whist drive in which eighty persons took part concluded the evening's play and was won by Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow.

COLONIAL SERVICE

NEW ASST. CROWN SOLICITOR FOR HONGKONG
Among the recent appointments notified by the Colonial Office is that of J. P. Murphy to be Assistant Crown Solicitor, Hongkong. This is a first appointment to the Colonial service.
It is also notified that Mr. C. H. G. Bradley, Assistant Auditor, Hongkong, is appointed Assistant Auditor, Uganda. Mr. Bradley entered the Colonial Audit Department, London, in June, 1925, and was appointed to Hongkong the following September, arriving here in October that year.
Promotions gazetted in the Colonial Office list include Mr. W. L. Handyside, Acting Headmaster, King's College, to be Senior Master, Education Department, and Mr. J. Ralston, Senior Master, to be Junior Inspector of English Schools, Hongkong.

CORRESPONDENCE

Civil Servants' Salaries

(To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph)

Sir,—In the last Budget debate and in the various reports of the Retrenchment Committee and Salaries Commission one salient point was apparently overlooked and that is:

The principle of paying all salaries and expenses in the same currency as the revenue of the Colony is collected.

The salaries of all officers or Civil Servants whether recruited in England or locally should be fixed and paid in Hongkong Currency thereby eliminating the danger of speculation in exchange and unbalanced budgets occasionally.

The Colony's finances should not be subjected to the vagaries and fluctuations of exchange. Nothing could be more illuminating and convincing than the following broad facts. During the last 50 years the highest rate of exchange was quoted in 1920 at 6/2 and the lowest rate was quoted in 1931 at 10/4d. per dollar. The difficulty of balancing the Colony's budget under such conditions is quite obvious and requires no explanation.

In the course of his pertinent remarks, Mr. Lo brought to the notice of the public that 60% of the Colony's revenue goes to the salaries based at 1s. 8d. What would be left of the total revenue should the rate of exchange drop to 1 shilling per dollar?

The Salaries Commission appointed on the 19th. October, 1928, considered that the salaries of officers, ordinarily recruited in England, should continue to be paid in sterling while an officer is on leave in England or other country having a gold standard.

Things have changed since, and England is off the gold standard. It would be preferable to abstain from indulging in long-drawn arguments causing tedious reading, as the value of such a letter lies in its brevity.

This is a mere suggestion apart from any recommendation for the reduction of sterling paid officers without impairing the high efficiency of the Administration.

The Colony should also look to the future by making provisions for some unforeseen expenses, such as its defence, etc.

FASCIST STATE

DUCE'S GRANDIOSE SCHEME

Rome, March 23. Signor Mussolini in a speech to 800 delegates representing 22 fascist corporations said that the inauguration of an Ideal Government—the 20th. Century Fascist Corporative State—depends on the successful conclusion of the Italo-Ethiopia campaign and the development of the European situation.

The Camera Del Fasci E Delle Corporazioni—Chamber of Fascists and Corporations—will replace the present Chamber of Deputies. It will include representatives of the 22 corporations, and delegates of workers, employers, agriculture, craft, commerce, professions, arts and legislative experts. Simultaneously he announced the nationalisation of industries supplying defence needs in order to prevent profiteering. He said that the Fascist Council will work out the details of the new system.—United Press.

TUESDAY, MAR. 24, 1936.

IS THE COLONY LIGHTLY TAXED?

A favourite argument by Government spokesmen that Hongkong is a lightly-taxed Colony was again heard during the debate on administrative costs in the Legislative Council on Thursday. In support of the theory, figures were cited comparing taxation here with the standards prevailing in Singapore and at Home. On the former point, it was shown that the assessed tax in Singapore is on a basis of 24 per cent., as against 17 per cent. in Hongkong. But before any safe deductions can be drawn from these figures it would be essential to know how property values compare between Singapore and Hongkong—in other words, whether rental standards are approximately the same, inasmuch as the assessed tax is based on rents. Until this point is cleared up, there is not much utility in comparing assessed tax percentages. So far as the respective positions between the United Kingdom and Hongkong are concerned, it would appear idle to make comparisons, for the simple reason that the conditions existing in the two places are in no sense similar. The standard of living of the majority of the people there bear no relation to that of the average taxpayer here in Hongkong. Admittedly, it would not be difficult to show that specific sections of the Colony's community get off relatively lightly in the matter of taxation. The well-to-do and the very poor, the last-named of whom either pay no regular rent or are accommodated in bed-spaces or cubicles, are not unduly taxed. Equally, Government servants and others who enjoy free quarters, or house allowances get off lightly. But between these groups there is a big section of the community which finds it hard to meet the burden of taxation. In this connection, we have to bear in mind the overcrowded labour market, which has a direct bearing on this matter of taxation. If rents go up, carrying enhanced taxation, the worker cannot expect to get recompense in the way of higher wages; he is at the mercy of the landlord in such circumstances. There are many other aspects of the question which could be cited to show the danger of making comparisons with other centres where the conditions are dissimilar. Generally speaking, however, it must surely be realised by the Government that the present is no time in which to contemplate any addition to the existing scale of taxation. The community as a whole, therefore, sincerely trusts that the official submission that we

TROUBLED RHINE WATERS.

THE Rhineland is Germany's western province, which the French in their hour of might sought, and failed, to carve out of the Reich; from which they thought to have removed the sting by the demilitarisation clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, incorporated in the Locarno protocols; and on which they now turn a gaze of growing and tragic anxiety.

In the Rhineland the French and German general staffs do not see merely a pleasant and wealthy tract of Europe. They do not hear

*the good Rhine flowing
In the heart of all Allemagne.*
They see it as a vital strategic factor in a battle still unfought.

To the French generals, the west, or left, bank of the Rhine is simply a base of concentration for a German attack on France. Germany has a foot on the French side of the ditch, a stronghold within the defences which nature designed for the protection of France.

The Germans point out that some millions of indubitable German subjects dwell on the wrong side of this "natural frontier."

A fortnight after the Armistice Marshal Foch presented a demand for the separation from Germany of the entire left bank of the Rhine, coupled with a permanent occupation by French troops of the bridge-heads on the right bank.

When Foch's plan was rejected, the French sought the same end by other means. Clemenceau believed that the Treaty of Versailles gave him what he wanted.

"In fifteen years," he told Poincaré, "Germany will not have fulfilled the clauses of the treaty. If you will do me the honour to visit my grave, you will be able to tell me. We stand on the Rhine and we remain on the Rhine."

NOTES OF THE DAY

COLONY DEFENCES

It is interesting to discover that Hongkong's defence forces are a match for a fair-sized enemy force which might attempt to take the Island by landing troops without preliminary bombardment on a large scale, and that even should such a force of invaders gain the beaches and the more rugged interior country, they could be driven back into the sea, by the fierce counter-attacks of the reserves (including the Volunteers) and such of those who survived the first struggle on the beaches. It is gratifying to know that the Colony's defence forces are efficient, well-organised and keen on the job, and that in the face of an ordinary attack from the sea, with naval artillery fire supporting the landing parties, they can give a good account of themselves. However, the official reports of lessons learned in the recent manoeuvres give us no room for complacency. It appears that, in the event of a sustained, and "ferocious" attack by enemy aircraft, Hongkong would suffer severely; and the inference may be drawn that were this aerial offensive maintained long enough the ultimate assault from the sea might find the defenders sadly depleted and their resistance much weakened. We are therefore pushed to the conclusion that anti-aircraft defence is the vital spot in Hongkong's armour, and that any weakness in this direction must be remedied before we are in a position to defend ourselves with real hope of success. For it is most improbable that in any attempted invasion of Hongkong aircraft would not play a major part. In this connection let it be noted that Singapore has taken steps to augment its volunteer anti-aircraft defence force materially. We suggest there is material among the men of this Colony for the organisation of a similar body, a complementary unit of men to be trained to work with the Royal Air Force in garrison.

have not reached the limit of taxation does not imply any intention of adding to the present burden. Any such move would meet with instant condemnation. The remedy for the Colony's present plight obviously lies in the direction of reducing expenditure, not in seeking means for the raising of more revenue.

"... the good Rhine flowing"

By George Malcolm Thomson

But this French complacency waned as the months passed and revealed that, though Germany would certainly fail to carry out the monstrous obligations of the treaty, it would probably prove impossible to apply in its severity the legal alternative—a permanent French occupation of the left bank of the Rhine.

FRENCH soldiers applied themselves once more to the task of detaching from the Reich this area which contains eight per cent. of Germany's territory, eleven per cent. of her population, and twelve per cent. of her coal.

Now there was in the Rhineland a genuine local movement for decentralisation. The Roman Catholic province of Lutheran Prussia had grievances against Berlin.

Could the French make use of this local sentiment? They determined to try.

And so there opened the whole bloody, bad-tempered and discreditable episode, half-farce, half-tragedy, of the Rhineland separatist movement. In the summer of 1919, a handsome young Wiesbaden lawyer, Dr. Adam Dorten, known as "Pretty Addi," proclaimed the Rhineland republic. The wind blew the proclamation posters away.

But in 1923, while the frightful, silent struggle in the Ruhr went on, while financial chaos reigned in Germany and the morale of the people was at a low ebb, a second and more dangerous separatist attempt was launched.

This time the French had prepared the ground for their separatist friends. Propaganda had been busy among the Rhineland people. They were "Celts, like us." French newspapers, magazines, and soup kitchens stressed the contrast of a distracted Germany and a strong, friendly France.

Besides, there was the tempting bait of escape from reparations payments.

IN the autumn of 1923, when German resistance on the Ruhr had collapsed, the Separatists launched their "putsch." Their leaders were Matthes, who had at one time run a Communist paper at Frankfurt, a German named Deckers, who commanded in Aix, Dr. Dorten, and a picturesque adventurer who was called Captain Parsival.

The rank and file, as usual in such adventures, consisted partly of ruffians and partly of honest men.

The red, white and green tricolour of the Rhineland was resurrected from the museums where it had lain since the days of the French Revolution and hoisted by the Separatist storm troops in Wiesbaden, Crefeld, Aix and Coblenz.

But from the first it was evident that French propaganda and French bribes had failed to win over the Rhinish population.

After a few weeks' precarious existence, the Rhineland republic collapsed, to the savage joy of the local inhabitants, who, at Pirmasens, set fire to the building in which the Separatists had taken refuge.

France's second attempt to solve the military problem of the Rhineland had failed.

THE third was Locarno. From the point of view of the French general staff this was a compromise. It involved a free acceptance by the German Government of the permanent demilitarisation of the left bank of the river and of a strip 30 miles wide on the right bank.

On the other hand, it envisaged an early withdrawal of the French garrisons. But this was compensated for by the guarantee by Britain and Italy of France's frontier against unprovoked attack.

It seemed that at last the problem was solved. France, with immense new fortifications defending her soil, looked out on a German zone empty of soldiers, naked of defensive works. Germany, on the other hand, felt easier in mind now that the menace, the very real menace, of the Separatist movement, was at an end.

But the long struggle for the strategic mastery of the Rhineland has not ended in a victory for France.

And, even if the Rhineland were not rearméd, what, it may be asked by the French generals, is a 30-mile demilitarised zone in these days of tanks and mechanised heavy guns which could cross it in an hour? What is the value of the neutralised Rhineland when a sudden secret mobilisation could transform a million Rhinish civilians into a million marching Reichswehrmen in a few hours?

1911-1936: AVIATION IN HONGKONG

EXACTLY twenty-five years ago this week the first aviator to fly in Hongkong took off at Shatin and, amidst the jubilation of thousands of people who assembled to witness his daring feat, succeeded in flying a distance of 200 yards!

The flight was made on March 18, 1911 by Mr. Van den Born, a Belgian. To-day, just over 25 years later, the Imperial Airways liner Dorado inaugurates a commercial service that brings Hongkong within 26 hours of Penang, and within ten days of London.

News reports of Van den Born's first flight in Hongkong are given below.

The S. C. M. Post of March 20, 1911, reported:

"Keen disappointment was manifested by a large number of people who assembled at Shatin on Saturday afternoon (March 18) to witness the exhibition of flying promised by Mr. Van den Born. It was a beautiful day and high hopes were entertained of witnessing the latest of the arts of locomotion under the best of circumstances. There was some delay at the outset on account of the late arrival of His Excellency the Governor, and when His Excellency did arrive it was found that the wind had risen too high to permit of flying. The machine was taken out of its shed, however, and the working of the motor displayed, but it was decided that it would be folly to attempt to rise in the teeth of a gale blowing about 30 miles an hour. The people hung around impatiently, and most of them were glad when the 5.10 train started for home, for, although the band of the Rajputs did its best to enliven matters, nothing would have induced the crowd to wait longer."

The First flight in Hongkong.

"As it happened, the wind died down and the few who remained had the opportunity of seeing Mr. Van den Born in the air. The machine rose within a comparatively short distance of its starting point to a height of several hundred feet, in a series of circles and descended on the spot from which it rose, thus proving the aviator's ability to fly (a question much debated during the afternoon by the disappointed) and his portability of the machine."

In its issue of March 24, the S. C. M. Post referred to the alarming mishap: "Mr. Van den Born, the aviator, gave an exhibition flight at Shatin yesterday afternoon. In the presence of a considerable number of people he rose beautifully to a height of from 200 to 300 feet, and performed several evolutions. He had intended rising higher, but experienced contrary winds. Flying over the railway station, Mr. Van den Born endeavoured to land in front of the hangar and, upon observing this, a large number of those present, the majority of whom were school children from Queen's College and other institutions, rushed to the spot. Seeing the danger of a collision and possibly injury to some of the more reckless of the spectators, Mr. Van den Born with great presence of mind (for he was travelling at considerable speed) swerved his machine clear. This left him too little distance in which to make for the shed, and the result was a collision in which the forepart of the machine was considerably crumpled. No injury resulted to the motor, fortunately, and Mr. Van den Born himself escaped with but a few slight bruises."

On March 27 he again made several successful ventures into the air—aviation was an accomplished fact in the Colony.

The airman then went on to Canton, and gave a most successful exhibition there in April.

Marble Sunk In 1881 Raised By Sanctions

Bowcombe Creek, near Kinsbridge, South Devon, Mar. 13.
THE shore of this little creek is to-day ringing with the sound of chain and tackle, sledge hammers and the popping of a little motor-winch.

Lying in the mud of the low-tide level are half a dozen large seaweed-covered blocks. On the shore, scrubbed and polished to a glistening whiteness, there are more of these great squares.

Passers-by hardly give a glance at the eight or nine workmen who are busying themselves among this sea-shore Stonehenge. But those workmen are pulling treasure worth thousands of pounds out of the sea, beneath which it has lain defying all efforts at salvage since 1881—for those great stones are pure Italian marble.

It is sanctions that is bringing them to the sea surface at last.

Fifty-five years ago a small Italian sailing vessel battled with a gale off the Devon coast. She carried more than two hundred tons of Italian marble for delivery to a London merchant. But the gale bent the Volvo, as she was called, a few miles off Salcombe. She was smashed on treacherous rocks. The captain's wife, put ashore on the rocks, was washed back into the sea. The whole crew were drowned.

ATTEMPTS FAILED
The two hundred or more tons of marble sank to the sea bed. After the underwriters had finished with the wreck six local fishermen bought it. They salvaged small pieces of marble and more than one hundred tons of good walnut wood, and then sold the wreck to a Plymouth merchant.

AGGRESSIVE POLICY BY THE KING?

AMERICAN VIEW

London, Mar. 10.
Kind Edward VIII, who is aggressively interested in international relations; economics and trade, is expected to have a strong influence on Britain's future policies.

The King's part will be played not through actual orders or instructions, but through the more subtle influence of royal prestige and personality.

The King's actual powers are sharply defined. He has not one-tenth the authority, for instance, of the President of the United States.

Strictly speaking, all bills of Parliament must be given the Royal Assent or dissent. However, it is a dead letter and no sovereign has tried to dissent to a bill since the time of Queen Anne.

The prerogatives and functions of the Crown may be summed up as follows:

The Royal Assent; to cause the admission of laws; to act on behalf of the whole community in its intercourse with foreign states, and, as part of that, to declare war or conclude peace; to direct the naval and military forces of the country; to administer the public revenue; to summon or dissolve Parliament; to create peers; and to coin money. The Monarch is the supreme governor of the church; the source of justice and of mercy, and of all offices, honours and charters rights.

But, in practice, the King acts in every case through ministers who are amenable to Parliament, and the choice of those ministers is the only prerogative which can constitutionally be exercised without responsible advisers; but even over this there is much parliamentary control for the royal favour can have no practical effect unless it rests upon men whose characters and measures are generally acceptable to both houses. The King's speeches are usually written for him by his ministers, or in any event, approved by them.

The Royal Assent, while a formality, is necessary before a bill can become law, which is one of the reasons why a council of state is assigned the powers of the crown in event of the King's grave illness. The Assent is sent to Parliament and read in Norman-French by the Clerks of both houses, "Le roy le veut." If Assent should be withheld, it is given in the gentle language, "Le roy s'aviser."

Colonial Powers
In colonies acquired by conquest or cession, the King may legislate as he pleases. Even in the case of the self-governing dominions he can "disallow" an act, but it is made subject to the constitution of the dominions to a period of limitation, usually one or two years.—United Press.

CIRCUS TIME IS NO. 1 TIME FOR KIDS ANYWHERE

A circus has arrived to the little Caucasian town and these three girls, Froulos, Ewlampla and Tanja are present for the first time in their life. Their features tell that it is an adventure.

ROMANCE COMES AFTER TRAGEDY

A mountaineering tragedy in which a girl heiress fell 500 feet to her death is recalled by the engagement of Miss Daphne V. P. Simpson to Mr. R. G. G. Mogridge.

They were members of a party of four Oxford undergraduates who climbed Tryfan, 3,000 feet peak in Snowdonia last March.

Miss Edna Gray Pritchard, aged twenty-two—who inherited £100,000 from her father, a Liverpool stockbroker—slipped during the descent, injured her legs and head.

ALL-NIGHT SEARCH
The fourth member of the expedition, Mr. J. N. Mills, placed her on a ledge and hurried down the mountain side for assistance.

He returned with a rescue party of thirty. Miss Pritchard had vanished. Search for the missing girl continued all through the night. Morning came—and with it the discovery of the tragedy. The girl's body was found at the bottom of a ravine, five hundred feet below.

Death: For Torture To Cows

Vienna, Mar. 16.
THE possibility of having his neck broken by a hangman as punishment for torturing cows faces Franz Sommer, 38-year-old Swiss labourer.

He is charged with twisting the tails of 15 cows until bones were broken. Whether Sommer is adjudged guilty and sentenced to the gallows depends on the extent of damages fixed. Under the law if damages exceed 250 schillings ($47.50) the guilty person may be hanged.

Should Sommer receive the heaviest penalty he would be executed by a hangman who does not use the ordinary type gallows. The condemned man is suspended a few feet in the air and his neck

"Heartbreak" Tune

SONG LEADS TO SUICIDE OF 16 LOVERS

A SONG which, it is claimed, has led to the suicides of 16 disappointed lovers in Hungary may now be banned at the request of the composer and lyric-writer.

The words of the song, "Gloomiest Sunday," were written by Laszlo Javor, a young poet, who declares that he was disappointed in love and for days was on the verge of suicide.

Instead he banished his sorrow by writing the lyric. A series of tragedies resulted.

For a time the tune was the most popular "hit" in the country.

Then, in a small Budapest tavern, a young workman named John Boros wound himself with a pistol after crooning the song to the accompaniment of a gipsy band. The words are as follows:—

O gloomiest Sunday! I wanted and waited.
Hundred white blossoms dearly faded,
Out went my dream-coach with fringes and bell,
Without you it turned, a sad thing to tell.
Since, love, all Sundays are dreary and sad,
My tears are my wine and grief is my bread,
O gloomiest Sunday! Ultimate Sunday! My love come and see, Hundred white blossoms are strewn upon me.

A tier and a priest, wax candles aflame.
Then gently we move thro' the flowering lane
Once more to behold you my dead life will sever,
Don't dread me, my darling, I bless you for ever,
This last of all Sundays.
According to a farewell letter found in the wounded man's pocket his sweetheart had quarrelled with him, and he could not bear the lonely Sundays he had to spend without her.

Subsequently 16 people who had been jilted or otherwise disappointed in love committed suicide after listening to "Gloomiest Sunday."
As a result the composer, Rezső Szécs, and Laszlo Javor have asked the Union of Hungarian Musicians, to which every band in the country belongs, to prohibit further performances of "Gloomiest Sunday" for the time being.

Love

Budapest, Feb. 28.
FOR nearly ninety years

Joseph Bruger, a well-known Budapest character who begs on the city bridges, forsook marriage. He became known as the misogynist beggar.

Then he fell in love with a charwoman, Anna Orosz.

To-day they were married—he aged ninety and she fifty-two—at a ceremony which many beggars attended.

"It is a love match. We both felt lonely," said Bruger after the marriage.

Japan Wants Old Warships

READY TO BUY FOR SCRAP

Honolulu, Mar. 15.
Steel once welded to shape a new naval destiny for the United States may be melted and molded into what promises to be a new naval destiny for Japan.

Details of plans for wrecking the old schooner-cruiser Alton revealed her scrap possibly will be sold to Japan.

The Alton, now moored in decommissioned row near the submarine base, Pearl Harbour navy yard, was formerly the U.S.S. Chicago, first all-steel warship constructed by the United States.

When the Chicago slid down the ways of the John Roach & Sons' shipyard, Chester, Penna., in 1889, there was simultaneously launched a new era of navy construction which had far-reaching effect upon the industrial life of the nation.

Several months ago the navy advertised the Alton for sale, and the American Iron and Metal Co., of Oakland, Calif., contracted to buy her for scrap. The purchase price was $14,680.

On New Year's Day, Louis Rothens, representing the Oakland company, arrived in Honolulu to arrange for wrecking the Alton. Japan he said, was one of his best customers for scrap steel and iron and purchase of Alton scrap by Japan was quite probable.

To-day, the Alton looks more like a decayed Mississippi showboat than a fighting craft. She last served a useful purpose when moored at the Pearl Harbour submarine base as a barracks for officers.

So little of her original glory was left, her name was changed from the U.S.S. Chicago to the Alton, to give a modern cruiser the former name.

Although serving at various times as flagship of the north and south Atlantic squadrons and the European squadron, she is reported never to have fired a gun at an enemy.

FIRST DEFEAT OF INVINCIBLE BADMINTON TEAM

Eliot Hall "A" Bow Before Inspired Recreio

PTE. E. NIELSON

FAVoured TO WIN TITLE

East Lances' Champion

Regarded by many as the most outstanding amateur Services boxer in Hongkong, Pte. Nielson of the East Lancashire Regiment promises to be one of the chief contenders for the Hongkong Area Welterweight boxing championship next month.

In 1934, his first year in Hongkong, Pte. Nielson was runner-up in the Area welterweight championship after putting up one of the best performances of the programme. It needed a casting vote by the referee before a verdict could be reached in the final scrap, and before giving this the referee complimented both Nielson and his opponent on their fine display and ordered an extra round to be fought.

HE HAD REVENGE

The winner was none other than Pte. Roberts of the South Wales Borderers, a prime favourite with local fight enthusiasts. At that time Roberts reigned supreme and was regarded as unbeatable at his weight. (Continued on Page 9.)

To-day's Tennis Programme

Two open championship matches are arranged for this afternoon at the Cricket Club.

S. A. Rumjahn will meet Frank Kwok and will be the first to reach the last eight stage of the open singles. Kwok's rigid defence may prolong the match, although it is doubtful whether he can avoid a straight sets defeat.

A. W. Ramsay and Gordon Burnett, who played rather disappointingly in their first round of the doubles, meet the Taul brothers. The Chinese are playing well at the present and a comfortable win for them is indicated.

Complete programme follows.
Open Singles (Third Round)
S. A. Rumjahn v F. H. Kwok
Open Doubles (Second Round)
A. W. Ramsay and G. C. Burnett v W. P. Taul and Y. P. Taul
Club Championship (First Round)
Lt. Cdr. Stapleton v Cdr. W. J. R. Craig
Club Handicap Singles (First Round)
Lt. W. P. Lee v E. H. Huthurst-3/6
Lt. W. A. Grant-16/2 v E. H. Williams-3/6
J. Thomson 1/16 v T. A. Pearce-16
T. J. Price v H. O'M. Deane-5/6
Club Handicap Doubles (First Round)
Y. H. Gordon and A. H. Penn 1/16 v H. H. Butters and D. McDougall-4/6
(Second Round)

TACTICS WHICH BROUGHT ABOUT THEIR DEFEAT

PLAY-OFF FOR THE TITLE WILL BE NECESSARY

(By "Veritas")

Last evening Recreio "A" men's doubles badminton team accomplished something which, for the past two years, everybody has said was impossible; they beat Eliot Hall "A", Colony champions, in a badminton league match. In consequence (unless Recreio unexpectedly lose a match) there will have to be a play-off for the men's doubles league title on a date and a venue yet to be settled.

Eddie Sousa, who played a notable part in Recreio's victory last night.

Well over 200 badminton enthusiasts crowded Club de Recreio for this match, which signalled the first defeat sustained by Eliot Hall "A" since the start of the Hongkong league. They were rewarded with the finest match ever seen in the Colony.

WHY THEY WON

Recreio won because they were shrewd enough to change their tactics. Eliot Hall, whose badminton has been nurtured on forecourt play—a type of game in which they play supreme in Hongkong—discovered they had to defend the base of the court. It was a new experience, and although they tried hard to adapt themselves to the requirements of this form of play, they could not sustain a defence against the fast moving and hard hitting Portuguese.

When Eliot Hall did get their opportunities of dictating the exchanges they exploited drop shots for all they were worth and had Recreio outplayed. But the home players invariably returned to lob high and deep from corner to corner, put the Varsity men on the run, and dash in for the final cross-court "kill".

It is questionable whether such fine driving was much of it in one match) has been seen before in Hongkong. All of the players were up to concert pitch and covered the court with remarkable agility and speed. When it came to scoring direct, across from driving the teams shared the honour, but Recreio benefited to a greater extent in the long run as their swift and well placed drives often paved the way for a winning smash.

THE HEROES

For the winners, L. A. Carvalho and A. M. Silva were the heroes. They won all three games and gave a fine demonstration of forceful and light badminton in each. Silva, always methodical and unruffled, created most of the openings by his subtle placements, while Carvalho, alert and eager, performed prodigious feats of overhead smashing in each game.

C. O. Lee and K. L. Yong were the best among the losers. Lee, boasting a beautifully stylish backhand, commanded the base of the court and very nearly found the right answer to the Recreio tactics. His clever shot was a high and deep lob taken on the backhand as the opposition advanced to the net. It scored heavily against Alves and Sousa.

Recreio also owed a lot to Dick Alves and Eddie Sousa, who, frankly speaking, were not expected to win more than one game. But they came up trumps in their second encounter when they not only beat Eliot Hall first string but, in so doing won the match.

Here again the methods of attack were deep drives and lobs to the corners and a quick follow-in for the "kill". Only Lee and Yong found the right answer to this type of game.

Not unnaturally the players were somewhat affected by the importance of the occasion, but Recreio settled down very much quicker than Eliot Hall, who subsequently failed to recover from an early shock of being led from games to one at the end of the first round.

MOST EXCITING GAME

To the delight of their supporters Recreio went to a 4-2 lead and then Sousa and Alves, making the most of their advantage of being up against rattled opponents, won the seventh game for the match. Eliot Hall recovered to win the eighth, but Carvalho and Silva refused to be denied a distinction, not hitherto enjoyed by any other pair, of winning all three games against the champions.

Easily the most exciting game of the occasion, but Recreio settled down very much quicker than Eliot Hall, who subsequently failed to recover from an early shock of being led from games to one at the end of the first round.

Not unnaturally the players were somewhat affected by the importance of the occasion, but Recreio settled down very much quicker than Eliot Hall, who subsequently failed to recover from an early shock of being led from games to one at the end of the first round.

P. K. Chan 17-21; lost to C. O. Lee and K. L. Yong 18-21; beat K. S. Liew and K. Y. Lee 21-17.
L. A. Carvalho and A. M. Silva (Recreio "A") beat Lee and Chan 21-10; beat Lee and Yong 21-19; beat Liew and Lee 21-12.
E. da Sousa and H. A. Alves (Recreio "A") beat Lee and Chan 21-18; lost to Lee and Yong 8-21; beat Liew and Lee 21-15.

POINTS CONCEDED

Kowloon Tong have conceded a walk-over to Recreio "A" in their match scheduled for to-morrow and a walk-over to Eliot Hall "B" in their match fixed for next week. The amended league table therefore reads:
P. W. L. P. A. Pts.

INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY

Local Tournament Final On Sunday

The final of the local International Hockey tournament will be played between England and Portugal on Sunday on the Royal Naval Recreation Club ground, King's Park at 10.30 a.m.

12 RUNS FROM ONE HIT

Christchurch, N.Z.

Somewhat unusual was the tally placed against a batsman's name in the scoring book for one hit, the figure 12 going down without the ball being lost. The stroke originally was worth two, two overthrows were run, then three more, a total of seven so far. On this last occasion however, a fieldman stopped the ball with his cap and of course, under Law 41, a penalty of a further five runs was exacted, thus bringing the grand total to 12.

England, who will play in red, will be represented by the following: A. B. Owen; J. E. Potter and Bds. F. Cox; Lieut. J. P. Williams (Capt.), W. A. Reed and J. Farmer; S. A. Fowler, G. E. R. Divett, Sub-Lieut. Wraith, Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite, and Flight-Lieut. Lascelles.

TRIANGULAR HOCKEY TOURNEY

Deciding Match On Monday Next

The deciding match in the Triangular Hockey Tournament will be staged on the Morina ground between the Army and the Hongkong Hockey Club on Monday, March 30, at 4.30 p.m. The Army will be represented by the following players: Sapper Howlett; Bds. Y. Cox and K. H. S. Sapper; Sapper Brown, Lieut. J. P. Williams (Capt.), and Alf. Din; Khuda. Bux, Mohd. Afzal, Lal Singh, Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite and L/Cpl. Nolan.

CRICKET NOTES

SPOTTING "STARS" AT KING'S PARK

QUINNELL IS A GOOD BOWLER

(By R. Abbit)

It was unfortunate, but these things have to be done or how could the Military Contribution be justified? But after dodging hordes of accreted soldiers festering with the weapons of their trade I managed to get across to Kowloon hotly pursued by what looked like a section of our excellent St. John Ambulance Brigade and a few others who looked like nothing on earth.

I finally arrived at the K.C.C. to discover if there was a Club game in any chance but found the ground covered by gallant men and fair ladies playing tennis. Thence to the Naval Sports ground where at last my ears were cheered by the sound of the bat hitting the ball. I gathered that the Empress of Britain had fielded a side against what was available of the Navy auxiliaries—technical casualties no doubt in the early hours of the fighting, (or were they left out of the fun? Too bad, too bad!) Anyway there was quite an enjoyable game. I did not see there in time to see the start but I managed to achieve one object and that was to see Quinnell in action. He has rather a curious delivery which I imagine may make the flight of the ball puzzling, but I think I know the ball that gets there of his wicket—a perfect length one which seems a shade faster than the others and still flicks the top of the stumps.

He produced two of them in quick succession at the end of the Empress's innings and they would have bowled a good deal better batsmen than the ones they did actually dismiss.

Thanks to their first two batsmen the Empress team won comfortably but the rest of the side were not very skilful. There was one bat, however, who had evidently been a cricketer in the days of his youth—I think he was probably on the wrong side of fifty, but he scorned gloves and pads and made one of the nicest old-fashioned square hits to leg that I have seen for years. (I am writing this in the pious hope that the Empress will have moved on before it appears in print.)

I umpired for a few minutes in this game, at the end, and was interested in seeing how the ball was taking spin on a rather loosely stretched bit of matting.

CLUB GAMES

Both the Indians and Craigengower managed to get in scratch games on their own ground but I am afraid I know nothing more of them beyond what has appeared in the papers.

THE MATCH OF MATCHES

I cannot quite recollect if I said that the K.C.C.-University match was to be played at Kowloon on 23rd March. There was some such idea, I believe. I shall deal with the game next Friday when I hope to have got a little more material and a little less cold and cough, but I may as well state now that the game will be played at the originally staged venue—the University ground at Pokfulam.

PLAYER SUSPENDED

WONG MEE SHUN OUT OF SOCCER FOR FORTNIGHT

The Emergency Committee of the Hongkong Football Association sat yesterday evening to consider the case of Wong Mee-shun the centre-half of the South China "A" team, who was ordered off the field during the match against the Kowloon F.C. on March 14 last.

After inquiring into the circumstances of the case, the Emergency Committee decided to suspend this player for two weeks as from yesterday.

WOMEN'S SHORTS BANNED BY ARMY CLUB

MEMBERS IN REVOLT

TENNIS STARS CONDEMN AN "OLD FASHIONED RULE"

The wearing of shorts by men or women has been banned in the Aldershot Officers' Club, rendezvous not only of officers, their wives, and daughters, but also of many county families living near Aldershot.

The ban does not apply to outside games, but is to be enforced throughout the clubhouse with the exception of the dressing-rooms.

Hundreds of women members are rebellious against the new regulation—and they have substantial support from the younger men members.

One prominent woman member said:

"This action of the committee, chiefly composed of very senior officers, and on which women are not represented, is in the limit."

"The committee is old-fashioned and quite unqualified to lay down the law as to what modern woman should wear."

"I don't believe the committee could distinguish between shorts and a divided skirt."

"DICTATORIAL"

"As most modern women wear divided skirts for games, the committee will probably find it impossible to apply the rule without creating scenes."

"I know that many of the junior officers do not support this dictatorial measure."

On the other hand, the secretary said:

"This club is the recreational centre not only of the command, but also of well-known civilian families of the neighbourhood, and the decencies must be preserved."

"We must put a stop to parties of young men and women bursting into the lounge in dirty sports clothes after playing mixed hockey matches, squash rackets, or lawn tennis; lolling all over the seats, and talking about in the ball-room at our tea dances."

"There is no excuse for that sort of behaviour in a respectable club, and we shall see that the rule is enforced vigorously. Not a single exception will be made."

AUSTIN'S VIEWS

Other views expressed were: Mr. H. W. (Junny) Austin, the England tennis star, who habitually plays in shorts: "I have worn shorts while taking tea in the social rooms of places like Queen's Club and even in hotel lounges—and nobody has expressed a wish to throw me out. I wonder will Scots soldiers wearing kilts be allowed to visit the club? Nobody seems to think it is disgraceful when they show their knees."

Miss Dorothy Round, the All-England tennis star: "It is the first time in my experience that a club has made a rule banning shorts. Everybody accepts shorts nowadays as more or less the regulation costume."

Mrs. Lavinia, ex-Wimbledon champion, and one of the greatest tennis coaches: "It does not seem to me an unreasonable attitude, for I do not know that shorts are particularly pretty garments for sitting about in."

La-Col. Jack Gannon, secretary of the Hurlingham Club: "Members and visitors of both sexes have played on our courts in tennis shorts and are allowed to wear them if they wish anywhere in the precincts of the club."

"WILL NOT SPREAD"

Major J. Donald, secretary of the Aldershot Command Golf Club, who is also a member of the Aldershot Officers' Club: "I don't think there is any likelihood of the new regulation spreading. I think it is a sensible regulation because members who do not wish to change after playing squash rackets or tennis can have tea on the verandahs."

"And, after all, you would not expect to be welcomed wearing shorts at a West End club."

FAVoured TO WIN TITLE

but in a return encounter at the Seamen's Institute, Nielson not only beat Roberts, but outclassed him in every phase of the game. This was a non-decision bout and regarded purely as a "friendly", though there was no doubting that Roberts fought as well as he could in view of his prestige which was at stake.

In the same year Nielson won the Battalion welterweight belt presented for the first time in 1934, and the following year he successfully defended his title and added to his laurels by annexing the Area championship. From the foregoing it is clear that Nielson is a boxer of no mean ability and will assuredly have a big say in the destination of the Area welterweight championship at Murray Barracks next month.

both hands. It is quite fair to say that Leonard is still an improving player and is now adding some good attacking strokes to a sound defence.

A. V. Gosano, the Recreio champion, and Lee Hui-nook of the University won their second round tie without being in the least bit extended. Gosano overcame a stroke-barren Ho with the loss of two games. Even so the Portuguese did not hit his best form. Owen-Hughes was too erratic off the ground to offer much resistance to Lee. Lee's own forceful driving kept Owen-Hughes away from the forecourt, which made the result foregone.

Full results of yesterday's Open matches were as follows: Open Singles—A. V. Gosano beat H. Y. Ho 6-1, 6-1; Lee Hui-nook beat H. Owen-Hughes 6-1, 6-1; J. W. Leonard beat Wong Fuk-nam 6-1, 7-5.

Open Doubles—H. D. and S. A. Rumjahn beat H. A. Barros and J. Goncalves 6-1, 6-3.

The R.A.S.C. easily beat the R.A.M.C. in a Division II match played at Sookunpoo, yesterday by 232 (for five wickets) runs to 89.

For the R.A.S.C. Capt. Welch batted splendidly and scored 132 runs while L/C. Muir took five wickets for six runs.

HELEN WILLS TO TRY FOR TWO TITLES

ASPIRATIONS FOR WIMBLEDON AND FOREST HILLS CROWNS

New York, Mar. 23.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody hopes to seek titles in the two major tennis tournaments this year—Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

The woman who won seven each of these championships in the past has no intention of retiring from active competition and has mapped out a preliminary schedule which she hopes will be climaxed by a big time campaign in England and the United States.

Mrs. Moody outlined her plans to the United Press before boarding a train after a three week visit in New York. Rumours that she might retire gained considerable circulation recently because of her sudden absence from practice at a local court. When she first arrived from the coast, Mrs. Moody practised daily. When she stopped, many experts who had remarked that she appeared to be playing in the best form of her career interpreted the halt as an indication she was retiring.

"WHY, THAT'S SILLY"

"Why, that's silly," Mrs. Moody said. "I practised eight times when I first arrived and felt quite fit. When I contracted a slight cold, which developed into a cough, and since it was right in the middle of New York's unusually cold spell, I decided not to risk further practice."

Aside from the cold, Mrs. Moody said she felt fine. As for her game, she said she's a poor judge of that but guessed it was all right because everyone told her she looked good in practice.

"I intend entering two or three preliminary tournaments in California," she said. "Other tournaments may follow and then I am most hopeful of playing at Wimbledon and Forest Hills. I will not know definitely about that until after the preliminary contests."

She said, however, that she expected no abrupt announcement such as featured her decision last year to go to Wimbledon.

"You remember last year," she explained, "I announced that I would go to Wimbledon at 2 p.m. one afternoon, and that night I took the train east."

WHY SHE MISSED FOREST HILLS

"You remember also, I did not compete in the nationals at Forest Hills, after returning from Wimbledon. My absence from that Tournament caused considerable unfavourable comment. I understand. Certain persons insinuated that I was afraid to meet Helen Jacobs again, after narrowly beating her at Wimbledon. That had nothing to do with it. I did not compete at Forest Hills because I felt run down and my physical condition was not what it should be."

Max Baer To Stage Ring Come-Back

WILL BE CHAMP IN YEAR AND HALF

Oakland, Cal., Mar. 23.

Max Baer definitely is going to stage a ring comeback and he'll be heavyweight champion of the world again in a year and a half—according to Max Baer.

"I'll be ready to fight again inside of three months," Baer announced as he pulled on the gloves for his first workout since Joe Louis annihilated him in four rounds in their New York bout. Baer is overweight and considerably slower than when he was champion.—United Press.

Small Town Girl

THE STORY THUS FAR

Kay Brannan, late of Wellesley, leaves a wild yachting party with Bob Dakin, medical doctor, following her back to Boston to marry her. But when he soberly he remembers Priscilla Hyde, his fiancée. The Dakins are unexpectedly kind but Priscilla is unwilling so Kay begs Bob to wait until Spring for divorce. He reluctantly consents but their marriage is to be one "in name only." As the months pass Bob becomes more and more engaged in his medical work. Kay discovers that he is corresponding with Priscilla but wisely refrains from asking questions for some time. Then Bob walks in.

CHAPTER XXV.

Bob stopped on the threshold, and Priscilla looked at him and at her; and Kay said quickly: "Why, Bob, you're early!" "Dead tired," he confessed. He explained to Priscilla: "Dr. Fabre has been away these last two weeks, and I'm doing double duty. Got a chance to break away this afternoon, for once." Priscilla had risen, and he took her hand. "Here," said Kay. She handed him a cup of tea. "Bob likes his strong and black as ink," she explained smilingly.

"Yes, I know," Priscilla assented, in a dry amusement. Bob sat down, on the edge of his chair, precariously. "What you need, Bob, is a cocktail," Priscilla suggested. "You're low!" He grinned. "Is that custom still prevalent?" he asked.

Priscilla's brows rose in an amused grimace. "Have you acquired virtue?" she exclaimed. "And do you find it is its own reward in this," he told her. "I'm doing so much work nowadays I never get a chance to let down."

"You ought to make the chance!" "I will, some day," he agreed. "A good old-fashioned bender might help a lot." He grinned at Kay. "Mentally, another cup of tea, Kay. I'll see you in a jiffy."

Priscilla looked at her watch. "Stephens should have come for me fifteen minutes ago," she said. "Was he outside when you came in, Bob?" He shook his head. "No," he confessed. "If I'd seen your Clinic, I'm afraid I'd have gone to the Clinic."

"Why?" she challenged. "Afraid of me?" "Too tired for social amenities," he told her evasively.

Kay suggested: "Why don't you run Priscilla home, Bob, if her car doesn't come? I know she's in a hurry." He looked at her, half-startled. "Oh, there's plenty of time," he protested.

"I'm sure Stephens will be here soon," Priscilla agreed. But the car did not come, though Bob went twice and thrice to see, and the waiting became awkward, and Priscilla suggested at last: "I'll walk. It's only a few blocks. He must have had a flat tyre."

Bob looked uncomfortable, and Kay said again: "You take her home, Bob! Dinner won't be ready for an hour, anyway."

"I hate making so much trouble," Priscilla insisted. "Stephens is so stupid."

Kay smiled at her mockingly. "Bob, you ought not to seem so reluctant," she warned him. "Run along!"

In the end, Bob surrendered; and when the thing was decided, he put on a surprising vivacity, laughed in a fashion strange to him of late. Priscilla bade Kay good-bye most graciously.

"You're sweet to let Bob take me home," she said. "When he's so tired, I'll send him right back to you."

"Why, there isn't the least hurry," Kay assured her. She closed the door behind her, heard their quick voices, their laughter as they descended to the street.

She was still standing there when presently she heard other steps returning, ascending the stairs; and her heart began to pound. It might be Bob. But when she opened the door she saw Genevieve.

And the other girl looked at Kay, and with quick amusement: "Heavens, child, you look as though you'd seen a ghost. Am I so terrifying?"

"I thought you were Bob!" Kay confessed. Genevieve nodded, her eyes shrewd. "I saw him on the side-walk. With Priscilla."

"She called on me," Kay explained. "And her car didn't come for her, so Bob had to take her home." The other seemed about to speak, then held her tongue. She came in, then closed the door behind her. "I just dropped in to say howdy," Genevieve explained. "Haven't seen you in a week." She laid aside her coat, and Kay urged:

"Your hat, too, Genevieve. Stay." The main was clearing away the tea things, and Genevieve demanded a cup. While they sat together, she watched Kay thoughtfully; and Kay saw her scrutiny and said a little breathlessly: "Bob will want to have a visit with you. He'll be back in five minutes, so."

Bob had been drinking and Kay's words sound like an accusation. But Kay is under a strain wondering about Priscilla, especially now that she realizes her love for Bob. Can she bring him to love her too? Be sure to read to-morrow's thrilling instalment.

Bob! I've never seriously thought about the possibility! At first I just grabbed him because he was my last hope. . . . She hesitated, her eyes for a moment shadowing. "And I meant to hang on to him like a life-line. But after I met his people, I was ashamed of myself, and I'd have let him go, if it hadn't been for Priscilla! I swore she should never have him!"

"But I never thought I might be in love with him. Till to-night!" She smiled in a way I fashion. "So the joke's on me, after all; and it's Priscilla's turn to laugh!"

And Genevieve could only say, angrily: "If Bob had any sense in him at all. . . . She was too wise to argue against the certain fact that Bob had stayed with Priscilla, instead of returning here, and that he had lied to Kay."

So they waited; and Kay, twisting her fingers together, confessed: "I used to think that if Bob ever did get a chance to do this operation, I wanted to be there, and see him, and be proud. Maybe Priscilla went to the hospital with him! Do you suppose she did?"

Bob Genevieve laughed at that suggestion, wholly incredulous. "And Kay wanted to telephone the hospital to make sure they had found Bob, but Genevieve would not let her. . . . Kay wished to telephone some inquiry about the patient and the operation, but Genevieve was adamant. Kay did call Dr. Dakin to tell him what Bob was doing; but children reported that Dr. Dakin was himself at the hospital, that Bob had summoned him, and Kay reported this to Genevieve, with bleak pain in her eyes and in her tones."

"He might have called me, too," she whispered; and she admitted: "I'm as worried as if I were the patient's wife, instead of the doctor's Genevieve. I want so much for Bob to do, and have everything go well. Dr. Dakin will be so proud!"

And added humbly: "And so will I!" After an hour or two, the Clinic telephoned to leave word for Bob that they had located Dr. Chandler, and that the other man would be on call to-night, so that Bob would be free. Kay took the message.

"I'll tell Dr. Dakin when he comes home," she promised; and she turned away from the telephone with her eyes shining.

"Bob's on his way home!" she cried. "He's finished! He's on his way home!" That was the Clinic. He must have asked Dr. Chandler—that's his assistant—to be on call; and that means he wants to celebrate! She raced away to her room. "I must wash my eyes, be ready for him! He's come home; not in five minutes, nor ten, nor in half an hour. And Kay while she waited faded like a dying flame; and Genevieve suggested that Bob must have gone home with his father, and Kay bravely agreed that this must be the case. But after a while they could find no more words of comfort to say. It was more than an hour before they heard Bob's key in the door.

Kay went to meet him; and Genevieve caught up coat and hat and followed her. She saw Bob come in, radiant with triumph, his eyes shining and his tones full of the intoxication of success; and he cried:

"I did it, Kay! I did it, and got away with it!" "I knew you would," Kay told him. "You were long enough about it," Genevieve protested in a good-natured wrath. "Kay here was on pins and needles all the time. I had to stay past my bedtime to keep her from fairly biting her nails. Good night, you two!"

Bob urged: "Wait a minute! I want an audience, Gen. I'm going to brag and blowl!"

"Kay will listen," Genevieve assured him. "To hear someone speaking of operations never did have any appeal for me." She said good night, closed behind her, and Bob caught Kay's arm and hurried her into the living-room and told the tale, speaking rapidly, his words tumbling, his eyes bright.

"Just the thing I'd worked on," he assured her. "An embolus on the saddle in the left femoral, and the leg turned white, and cold. . . . I got hold of Father, and Doctor Fabre, to watch." He plunged into the technical aspects of the operation, he cried. "I've got out of it, Kay!"

"What a kick I got out of it, Kay!" he cried. "I've no notion! Father and the chief held their hands on the leg, under the sheet. They could feel it flow again. . . . He went over and over the same ground endlessly; and Kay listened, and smiled, giving him wholehearted approval with no stint or reservation to mar his happiness."

He finished and said: "I've a notion to take a drink, to celebrate! Haven't we got something tucked away, Kay?" "Not a drop," Kay confessed. "Not even in the medicine cabinet!"

"I'll write a prescription and go down to the drug store," Bob declared. "It's not closed yet." He looked at Kay. "Disapprove, do you?" he asked narrowly.

"I think you deserved it," Kay said. "And he heard the past tense and his cheek flamed slowly."

Bob has been drinking and Kay's words sound like an accusation. But Kay is under a strain wondering about Priscilla, especially now that she realizes her love for Bob. Can she bring him to love her too? Be sure to read to-morrow's thrilling instalment.

NEWS OF THE DAY IN PICTURES FROM FAR AND NEAR

Hongkong Telegraph PHOTONEWS

HAPPENINGS AS SEEN BY THE CAMERA'S EYE

DEATH FOR DOPE-SMUGGLERS IN THE NORTH

In the old days it was opium. To-day heroin, almost unknown in China as recently as 1928, is one of the commonest drugs used by addicts.

Though the habit of heroin-taking has increased so rapidly, the most determined efforts are being made by the Chinese Government to put an end to the practice. These efforts consist of strong propaganda against drug-taking, the opening of more than 600 treatment centres for addicts up and down the country, and the most stringent laws against drug-smugglers, and addicts who relapse after being discharged from a treatment centre.

Death is often the penalty for smugglers and relapsed addicts—as it is also for farmers who grow the forbidden opium poppy. This law is administered without respect of persons. A general who was found to be using one of his aeroplanes for drug-smuggling was led away immediately and shot.

The hospitals in Peiping alone admitted 5,500 patients in 10 months—of these only 60 were known later to have relapsed into drug-taking. Of the 60, 20 were finally set free, 30 were given terms of imprisonment, and 10 were simply beheaded.

The authorities reckon that Peiping alone still contains 40,000 drug addicts—more than a quarter of whom are coolies and manual labourers who take to the drug for relief from physical exhaustion.

Other countries cannot claim to have clean hands in respect of China's drug-problem. 20,000 drug-dealers operating in Peiping are Japanese subjects—and the Chinese say that they get no satisfaction from handing them over to the Japanese authorities. Many British vessels, they also state, are engaged in the drug-smuggling business.

BRANDING THE SMUGGLER PENALTY FOR A FIRST OFFENCE

CAUGHT—FOR THE SECOND TIME

The smuggler is taken to one of the 600 centres recently opened for the treatment of drug addicts. Here he is branded on the arm. If he is caught a second time he will be shot. In 1934, 263 death sentences were carried out.

ARREST OF A HEROIN SMUGGLER

Chinese police arrest a heroin smuggler outside the railway station at Peiping. Peiping is said to contain 40,000 addicts, and the most determined efforts are being made to put down the drug traffic.

A branded man has been caught by the police. Though he knows he is going to death he has still enough curiosity to gaze at the photographer. Heroin, now becoming the commonest of drugs, is usually taken in cigarettes, pinches of it being pushed in among the tobacco.

HE WILL SMUGGLE NO MORE

No trial. No pronouncing of death sentence. No "benefit of clergy." A branded man has been found with drugs concealed about him. He is taken away into a field and shot. There is not even a firing squad... no need to waste bullets on a dope smuggler. Right, his turn next.

Viennese Journalist On Tour

ROUND-THE-WORLD CAR OWNER TO VISIT H.K.

ONE of the world's most remarkable motorists has just spent a few days in England.

He is E. H. Naumann, a Viennese journalist, who is engaged on a motor tour of the world in the famous Popular 8 HP Ford.

This amazing trip has already lasted three years and covered 200,000 miles—all in the same car. It is still only about half completed, and some of the stages of the journey yet to be covered represent, in themselves, extraordinary motoring feats.

When seen at Dagenham, where he visited the Ford Works, this all-over-the-world motorist was about to have his car shipped to Tangier, Morocco.

From Northern Africa he will drive the length of the Continent to Capetown, including the crossing of the Sahara Desert.

The formidable journey across the sandy wastes of the Sahara, with nothing but a faint track to guide the traveller, with its sudden shifting sandstorms, and the scant chance of rescue should a breakdown occur in the wildest regions, has hitherto been attempted only by specially-prepared cars manned by well-equipped crews.

Mr. Naumann will undertake it in his Popular Ford, accompanied only by his wife, and without any special equipment.

He feels confident that his car will overcome the difficulties as he has already covered hundreds of miles on the snow-blocked roads of Northern Europe.

To Run 350,000 Miles
From the Cape, this world motorist will proceed via Aden, Syria, Persia, India, Hongkong, China, to Japan. He will then ship his car to America and drive across the U.S.A.

In America he hopes to visit Mr. Henry Ford by which time he anticipates that his car will have covered over 350,000 miles.

Mr. Naumann, who has for years been an enthusiastic long-distance driver, and was the first to cross Siberia by car, believes that he must have broken most mileage records during the last three years.

He has nothing but praise for his car, which has carried him through countless difficulties with scarcely a hitch, and his experiences afford striking evidence of the sturdiness and dependability of this famous light car—the least expensive Saloon car ever produced by a British factory.

Despite the high mileage covered, much of it over appalling roads, he states that no important replacements have been made to the car, and it is still fitted with the original Dagenham-built engine No. 4484.

He and his wife carry out their own running repairs. Accommodation costs them little, as they live and sleep in the car, the interior being adapted for this purpose. Such necessities as a portable stove and cooking utensils are carried on the roof.

He earns his living by writing accounts of his experience and of the countries he visits.

The car is decorated with 62 badges, representative of the motoring clubs and associations of 17 countries.

WORLD RIGHTS FOR BRITISH FILMS

NEW FIRM'S PLANS

Trafalgar Films, with headquarters at the studios being built by London Film Productions at Denham, Buckinghamshire, will begin this month productions for distribution in all countries by United Artists.

The first two pictures by the Trafalgar company are to be "Fagiolini" and "Elizabeth of England."

The rights of "Fagiolini" were purchased only a few weeks before American producers secured the rights in all other Italian operas. "Fagiolini" is therefore likely to be the only Italian opera to be filmed in London. The star will be Mr. Richard Tauber.

Jack Oakley, the United States expert, went to England from Hollywood to supervise the building work at Denham, and the studios will cost about £375,000.

Murray Silverstone, of United Artists, stated that Trafalgar Films would make two or three pictures a year, costing from £150,000 to £200,000 each.

Mr. E. H. Naumann and his wife.

Funeral Service By Sick Bedside

WIFE'S INSISTENCE

Brisbane, Mar. 6.
Gradually prepared for the shock by a series of supposed reports from the hospital, Mrs. Vera Mann, mother of a three days' old baby and wife of Mr. Richard Mann, who was killed in a smash at Coorparoo yesterday morning, was gently told to-day of her husband's death. Her strength proved unequal to the shock and she collapsed.

Her sister, who had been with her since the accident, took charge of the baby and the doctor remained to give what aid he could.

When she recovered later in the day Mrs. Mann asked that the casket be brought into her bedroom before the funeral. Fearing that a distressing scene might have serious effects the doctor tried to dissuade her, but when she became almost frantic in her insistence, he thought it wise to comply with her wishes.

A pathetic scene took place at the bedside, as the casket was lowered on to trestles placed near her bed. Mrs. Mann leant over and kissed her husband. As the Rev. A. C. Kennedy of the Coorparoo Presbyterian Church, conducted the pre-commitment service she lay back quietly on her pillows, her left hand resting lightly on her husband's forehead. As the service concluded she asked her sister to remove a lock of her husband's hair, and, with this clasped in her hands, she sat up and, through the open windows, silently watched the funeral move away. Later she collapsed and her condition is causing anxiety.

Yugoslavian Eggs Eaten in Britain, Thanks to Sanctions

London, Mar. 20.

Britain will eat more eggs and bacon from Central Europe in consequence of League of Nations sanctions against Italy.

Word comes from Geneva's experts on sanctions that sanctionists are not buying from non-sanctionist nations.

This accounts for the shifting of trade from Hungary, which is not applying sanctions against Italy, to Yugoslavia, which is applying sanctions against Italy.

This is one of the outcomes of the mutual support which states imposing sanctions under Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations are giving to one another.

Britain in the case of Yugoslavia has now agreed to material reductions in the limitations and tariffs it has hitherto applied to Yugoslavian eggs, bacon, turkeys and chickens.

Yugoslavia has been exporting about 178 hundredweight of eggs to Britain each year and paying a duty of 1s. 6d. per 120 eggs, according to weight. The duty on turkeys is reduced from 8d. to 1d. per pound, this concession being limited to 60,000 hundredweight per annum. The duty on chickens is similarly reduced from 8d. to 1d. per pound, this concession being limited to 20,000 hundredweight per annum.

The agreement was reached after consultation with the British Dominions and Southern Rhodesia, whose consent was required under the Ottawa agreement.

KING EDWARD'S WORKSHOP

London, Mar. 12.
King Edward, who wants to know "what makes the wheels go round" in his new job as monarch of 493,000,000 people, has enlarged his offices.

His father, King George V. had three rooms on the first floor of Buckingham Palace where he discharged his duties of State. The new king, reluctant to disturb them when he found he needed more room, took over the Belgian suite, a group of rooms overlooking the palace quadrangle.

The rooms, once set aside for receiving visiting royalty, are filled with messengers, secretaries and clerks.

One room is the King's personal "workshop" and across a hall are the rooms of his business staff.—United Press.

STILL SOVIET'S BEST CUSTOMER

BRITAIN TOOK 25 PER CENT. OF EXPORTS

Britain is still Russia's leading customer.

Trade figures for 1935, published recently, reveal that more than 25 per cent. of Russia's total exports last year went to Britain, the trade turnover having registered an increase of 14,190,000 roubles over that for 1934.

Britain in 1935 bought Russian goods to the amount of 86,255,000 roubles. Her exports to Russia were only 43,382,000 roubles.

Russia's favourable trade balance last year was 126,000,000 roubles, compared with 186,000,000 roubles in 1934.

Soviet economic penetration into Persia, Afghanistan, Sinkiang and Outer Mongolia last year continued at a rapid pace.

Forty per cent. of Persia's trade turnover last year was with Russia.

The Soviet absorbed all Persia's exports of rice and livestock and 90 per cent. of her wool and cotton.

RESULT OF AGREEMENT

Exports of metals, machines, cement and automobiles to Persia considerably increased following the trade agreement of last August, whereby the Soviet Union undertook to render technical aid in the development of industry in Persia.

Russia is now also playing an important role in the industrialisation of Afghanistan, whose imports of machinery and technical commodities from Russia have markedly increased. Twenty-five per cent. of Afghanistan's trade turnover was with the Kremlin.

Russia purchased last year almost the whole of Sinkiang's yield of wool hides, cotton, raw silk and undressed furs.

Outer Mongolia's foreign trade was practically confined to Russia. Eight years ago only 34 per cent. of her trade went to the Soviet.

Exports of Soviet machinery, automobiles and metals to Mongolia have increased fivefold in the past five years.

FRANCE THREATENS GERMANY

LOCARNO TERMS ARE FINAL COUNTER-PROPOSAL UNACCEPTABLE VIRTUAL ULTIMATUM SERVED ON BERLIN

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")
(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, Mar. 24, 12.20 p.m.)
Paris, Mar. 24.
France is prepared to act against Germany if Herr Adolf Hitler, the Chancellor of the Reich, rejects the Locarno Powers' joint proposals for the protection of Western European frontiers and replacement of the repudiated Locarno Treaty.
Officials of the Government said to-day that in the event of Great Britain, Belgium and Italy refusing to support France, the French Government will independently apply severe financial sanctions against Germany, including the termination of the Franco-German clearing agreement which provided Germany with much-needed foreign currencies.—United Press.

SURPRISE IN LONDON
London, March 24.
Considerable surprise has been created among the delegations to the London peace conferences by the report from Paris that the French Government does not intend in any circumstances to recede from the agreement reached by the Locarno Powers and communicated to Germany last week.
The proposals called for a new formula of security in Western Europe and the policing of the Rhineland demilitarised zone by British and Italian troops, among other things.
GERMANY, SAY THE FRENCH, MUST EITHER ACCEPT OR REJECT THE TERMS OF THE LOCARNO POWERS.

M. Pierre Flandin, the Foreign Minister, is credited with the statement that he will not return to London to discuss any German counter-proposals.
It is felt among the international delegates here that this attitude has complicated the whole situation and made agreement with Germany practically impossible.
No official pronouncement has yet been made, but it is pointed out that both M. Flandin and M. Paul van Zeeland, the Belgian Prime Minister, have decided not to return to London and that any negotiations on German counter-proposals could not be carried on through the usual diplomatic channels.—Reuter.

Germany Shocked
Berlin, Mar. 24.
German official quarters are shocked by the reports that M. Pierre Flandin, the French Foreign Minister, has refused to consider counter-proposals to the Locarno Powers' suggestions for the protection of Western European frontiers.
This attitude is regarded as a contradiction of the British policy, stated by Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons.—Reuter.

BRITISH POINT OF VIEW HOPES FOR HELP FROM HITLER PROPOSALS NOT FINAL

London, March 23.
The proposals sent to Germany by the Locarno Powers, designed to surmount the crisis which has arisen by the unilateral denunciation of the Locarno and Versailles Pacts by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, were not intended as an ultimatum, declared Lord Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, speaking at Bristol to-day.
"We want no encirclement of Germany and no exclusive alliances, but a European partnership in which Germany will freely join."
"We have asked Germany a hard thing, but Germany had created conditions by which the stability of Europe was shaken and it was not too much to ask that Germany make a contribution of admitted difficulty," he said.
"I have read the press reports that Germany will not be able to accept at least one of the proposals addressed to her by the Locarno Powers, but as far as the British Government is concerned any serious counter-proposals would be received with the most careful and anxious consideration."—Reuter.

INAUGURAL AIRMAIL FLIGHT DORADO ARRIVES FROM PENANG ON SCHEDULE TO MINUTE

Another milestone in the history of aviation in Hongkong was marked this morning when the Imperial Airways liner Dorado, under the command of Capt. J. H. Lock, arrived at Kai Tak from Penang with 16 bags of mail and a passenger, thus inaugurating a direct service from London to Hongkong.
A large crowd gathered at the aerodrome to witness the landing of the Dorado, chief amongst them being His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, the Hon. Commr. G. F. Hole (Harbour Master and Director of Air Services), the Hon. Dr. A. R. Wellington, Mr. H. R. Butters (Postmaster General), Mr. E. Nelson (Superintendent of Kai Tak Aerodrome), Wing-Commander Bishop and Mrs. Bishop, Dr. G. W. Pope, Lieut. Col. H. L. Murrow, Mr. C. W. Jeffries and Capt. W. J. R. Craig (A.D.C. to the Governor).
Many of those present had arrived on the landing ground just after 11 a.m. notwithstanding the fact that the Dorado was not scheduled to arrive until 11.30. The plane was sighted almost to the minute and at 11.35 she made a graceful landing and taxied into the shed.

FIRST PASSENGER
A surprise greeted the onlookers when they found that the Dorado, which was to carry only mail on this trip, had a passenger. This was Mr. Ong Ee-lin, of Kuala Lumpur, an enthusiastic amateur flyer, who came up to Hongkong to meet his brother. He therefore holds the distinction of being the first passenger to land in the Colony from an Imperial Airways plane.
Capt. Lock and his crew were welcomed by His Excellency, who congratulated them on the success of their inaugural flight. Others also showered their congratulations on Capt. Lock and his men.
A group photograph was then taken of His Excellency together with the Hon. Commr. Hole, Capt. Lock and Mr. A. C. Thomas, the Second Pilot of the Dorado.

Interviewed by a representative of the Telegraph, Capt. Lock said the trip was without incident except for a short delay at Saigon. The weather encountered had been exceptionally good. They left Penang at 6 a.m. yesterday, arrived at Saigon at 11.30 a.m., left at 2.15 p.m. and arrived at Tauran at 5.30 p.m. They stayed at Tauran overnight and left at 6.30 this morning.
WEEKLY FLIGHTS
Capt. Lock said a weekly schedule would be maintained, and until such time as Imperial Airways decided to use another machine, the Dorado would be in use. She will leave Penang on Monday mornings, arrive at Hongkong on Tuesday mornings, leave here on Fridays, and return to Penang on Saturdays. This schedule, as said, would connect with the service between London and Australia via Penang.

Altogether, 16 bags of mail were carried by the Dorado on this trip, 14 being from London, and one each from Singapore and Penang. The mail weighed 47 lbs.
Mr. Ong, the passenger, is an enthusiastic flyer, being a member of the Kuala Lumpur Flying Club, and has a total of approximately 200 flying hours to his credit. He flew from Kuala Lumpur to Penang in his own machine to join the Dorado.

Reward For Slayer Of H.K. Tiger

Big game hunters have a chance of winning a reward by seeking out the tiger, or leopard which has recently been seen on several occasions on the hillsides in Kowloon and the New Territories.
A notification issued by the Hon. Inspector General of Police states that a reward of $50 will be paid to the person or persons responsible for the killing or capture of the beast.
"Payment of the reward," it is stated, "will be conditional on proof to the satisfaction of the Inspector General of Police."

AN HISTORIC OCCASION

Japanese Officers On British Ship PRACTICE WITHIN SHIPPING ACT CLEARANCE MUST BE GIVEN

A case which is probably unique in the history of shipping in Hongkong was brought before Hon. Commr. G. F. Hole, Harbour Master, this morning, when an appeal was made by Captain F. A. Kjelgaard, master of the freighter Bright Vega, whose ship has been detained in Hongkong owing to exception being taken to the fact that, though under the British flag, the vessel carries only two British officers, the Captain and Chief Engineer, the others being Japanese.
Both the Marine Office and Captain Kjelgaard have wired to the Board of Trade, it is understood, and have received replies that there is nothing to prevent the ship sailing from Hongkong with her present crew, owing to a clause in the Merchant Shipping Act which allows British ships which habitually ply outside the United Kingdom to carry a foreign crew.

Following his decision, it is understood that the case was referred to the Attorney General this morning.

The Attorney General has decided, it is learned, that the stopping of the ship in Hongkong and the refusal of a clearance certificate would be "too risky," as there is no legislation in the Colony to provide for such a case as this.

The Shipping Act provides that the officers of whatever nationality should have a certificate, but it does not describe the certificate as being taken in the Colony to force the substitution of British officers for the Japanese officers might not be justified according to law.
The Bright Vega will accordingly be given a clearance certificate to sail for Shanghai and Japan. She intends leaving to-day or to-morrow.
Captain Kjelgaard states that he has visited a number of British ports within the last few weeks and no exception has been taken, and moreover, his company in England gave him to understand that the practice of carrying a foreign crew was quite in accordance with British law.
Apparently, as the Captain's case is upheld, the decision means that any British ship on the China coast which does not receive a passenger certificate, and which never goes to the United Kingdom, can substitute

"VICTORY KISSING OUR FLAG" IL DUCE'S MESSAGE TO NATION SEES END OF SANCTIONS

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received, March 24, 8 a.m.)
Rome, Mar. 23.
Signor Benito Mussolini, Italian Dictator, spoke to a crowd in front of his official residence to-day, declaring that the dark clouds which had been hanging over Italy would soon disappear.
This is taken as an intimation that the Dictator expects an end of the League of Nations' sanctions and of hostilities in Ethiopia.
"Victory is kissing our flag in East Africa. The territory our soldiers are conquering is already consecrated to our nation," Signor Mussolini asserted.
He was evidently referring to the League of Nations Covenant, under which sanctions were applied, when he said:
"The vital progress of the Italian people has never been halted by the historic pact which, instead of promising peace, threatens humanity with even vaster wars."—United Press.

LEAGUE MEETING
London, Mar. 23.
The League's Committee of thirteen met in London to-day to consider the Ethiopian and Italian replies to the Committee's appeal for negotiations on March 8.
The Committee decided to endeavour to bring the parties together in order to obtain, within the framework and in the spirit of the Covenant, a prompt cessation of hostilities and a definite re-establishment of peace.
The Committee also decided to submit the pretext of the Ethiopian

ETHIOPIANS URGE ARMED LEAGUE AID FRESH APPEAL TO POWERS PROTEST AGAINST USE OF POISON GAS

London, Mar. 23.
The Ethiopian Government has sent a second note to the League of Nations protesting against the use of poison gas by the Italian troops invading Ethiopian territory, and appeals to the League for immediate assistance.
The note states that for fifteen months Ethiopia has been appealing to the League for intervention in one way or another, but no answer has been given.
Now Ethiopia is again appealing, it goes on, under Article XVI of the League Covenant, which calls, first, for effective forms of sanctions, and second, for the assistance of the beleaguered state, suffering at the hands of a nation which the League has declared to be an aggressor.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

AGREE TO REFUSE SANCTIONS THREE-CORNERED AGREEMENT SIGNED AT ROME

Rome, Mar. 23.
An agreement not to apply sanctions against Germany in the event of the League of Nations decreeing them, is believed to be one of the terms embodied in the pact between Italy, Austria and Hungary, which was signed to-day by the representatives of the three Governments meeting in Rome.
It is also understood that the Pact expresses the determination to maintain the independence of Austria and invites the adherence of other powers to the agreement, apparently with the intention of enabling Austria to collaborate more closely with her neighbour, Czechoslovakia.
The economic side of the proposals expresses the determination of three countries concerned to increase trade to the mutual advantage of each.
The full terms of the pact will be published to-morrow.—Reuter.

BOMBERS ACTIVE (Special to "Telegraph")

Rome, Mar. 23.
Marshal Pietro Badoglio's communiqué, received from his field headquarters in Ethiopia to-day, does not mention the reported Ethiopian counter-attack on the northern front, which according to Addis Ababa reports, has met with pronounced success and is personally directed by the Emperor Haile Selassie.
The Italian communiqué claims that four Ethiopian aircraft have been destroyed in the last four days.
It asserts that the bombing attack on Jijiga, reported yesterday, resulted in the destruction of supplies, magazines and depots.
The organisation of the Italian Army's supply system continues, as far as the most advanced lines. A bridge 110 metres long over the Takazze River has been completed.
It is officially denied that Italian aeroplanes bombed a British ambulance at Jijiga.—Reuter Special.

JIJIGA CASUALTIES HARRAR, MAR. 23.

It is officially stated that fifteen persons were killed during the Italian bombing attack on Jijiga. Four of the 83 wounded have since died.
The wounded include several Arabs who are British subjects.—Reuter Special.

Vital Shanghai Election LARGE TURN-OUT AT POLLS

Shanghai, Mar. 24.
The most vital municipal election in years, at which the Japanese community is attempting to wrest a seat in the Council of the International Settlement either from the British or American camp, brought approximately 1,900 ratepayers to the polls yesterday.
This is a record for one day's voting in Shanghai, and is about 500 more than the total vote last year.
The election's outcome, however, the polling continued.—Reuter.

LINCOLNSHIRE ENTRIES GO TO POST TO-MORROW

London, Mar. 23.
The Lincoln flat racing season opened to-day in dull but mild weather on the perfect Carlisle track, where the Lincolnshire Handicap will be run on Wednesday.
A record field is expected, as there are thirty-nine probable starters. Owing to the terrible winter, trainers have had little chance of getting their horses fit, however.
Overcast, which finished fourth last year, is regarded as an excellent chance, since he has been trained on the sands, nearby, and the trainer, Russell, hopes to repeat the victory.

Lost! 22 lbs. of FAT Safe, Easy Way

Young lady jubilant—Reduced 22 lbs. (lost 4 inches, Feet, Oh, so light and full of pep.)

Suppose you weighed 174 lbs., and every time you looked in a mirror tears almost came as you gazed on a double chin, heavy arms and legs, large hips and bust.

And suppose this over-fat condition made you too heavy for your own feet—until you felt constantly all dragged out, stomach upset with gas and indigestion and dreadful dizziness, sick headaches.

And then you tried one thing after another—and you're all ready to despair.

Such was the dilemma of Mrs. C. H. Blackburn, Lorain, Ohio, U.S.A. She read about Bunkora, the one safe, natural way to take off excess pounds by cleansing wastes from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. But let her tell her story:

"Fast disappointments naturally made me skeptical, but it's lucky for me that I finally did take Bunkora. With the first bottle, the dizziness, indigestion and constipation disappeared. What a relief. Keeping on with the treatment—the first thing I knew my dresses were getting loose—when I had used seven bottles I stepped on the scale and lo! and behold, I had lost 22 lbs.—from 174 to 152 lbs. in a pleasant, easy way. I really feel like a different person."

You may not want to lose 22 pounds. But if you have excess fat you can lose it in the famous "3 easy stages," as shown in this picture. Each day for the next week, take a little Bunkora, the new treatment. No need to starve. Eat as much as you want. The

Toronto, Mar. 15.

Despite the fact her latest child died soon after birth, Mrs. Matthew Kenny is leading Toronto's "Maternity Sweepstakes," with a prize of U.S. $500,000 waiting for her in October.

The strange will of Charles Vance Millar, awarding $500,000 to the Toronto woman who had the most children between October, 1926 and October, 1936, did not specify that the children must live. All that is required is that their births be registered.

The son born to Mrs. Kenny was her tenth child since October, 1926. She refused advice of physicians that she go to a hospital and remained in her small frame house here. The child weighed six and a half pounds at birth and apparently was healthy, but died about an hour after being born.

The birth put Mrs. Kenny once child ahead of Mrs. Grace Bagnato, who has had nine children since 1926 and a total of 20 since she was married. Mrs. John Nagle, wife of an unemployed carpenter, also has had nine children since 1926, but there is doubt whether all of them were born in Toronto.

Millar's will specified that all of the children must be born in Toronto.

Mrs. Kenny is 32, and less than five feet tall. Married at the age of 16, the slender, delicate woman has had a total of 16 children. She was particularly saddened by the death of her latest son because she had intended naming him for Millar.

"I am sure we will win all that money anyway," she said.

Millar's friends and business associates believe he was playing a practical joke when he made a will offering a prize for a maternity race. The document was legal, however, and already the executors of his estate are converting bonds and other assets into cash in preparation for the pay-off.

The Maternity Sweepstakes wasn't the only idea Millar had. He earned a vast fortune in gold and silver mines and when he died in 1926 it was found his will had other provisions.

He willed brewery stock to every Protestant minister in Toronto; he

GODLESS LEADER'S GLOOM

40,000 VILLAGE CHURCHES

Moscow, Mar. 6.

DESPITE years of effort on the part of the Godless Society, religion is still holding on in Russia.

Yaroslavsky, a veteran Bolshevik and president of the society, admitted this to-night at a meeting celebrating its tenth anniversary. About half of the population of the Soviet is still religious, he declared. Of the members of the collective farms 34 per cent., and a still larger percentage of the individual peasantry still cling to the old religious beliefs, he continued. Churches are still open in 40,000 villages.

"The young people are with us," he said, "but it is the older people we must win away from religion."

PARACHUTIST'S BOAST

Yaroslavsky called for a redoubled effort to uproot the last remnants of religion from the country.

Following his address, Bassilova, head of the women's division of the Young Communist League, declared, "My children will know God only as a word in the dictionary."

Nina Kanneva, a young blonde girl parachute jumper, who holds the world record for delayed jumps, declared, amid laughter, "she left the meeting, 'I have flown high in the air, made many jumps, and I never saw any God or angels.'"

PRAYERS ON THE FARMS

The Hall of Columns, which was a nobleman's club in pre-revolution days, was crowded with 2,000 delegates from all parts of the Soviet Union, representing 5,000,000 members of the Godless Society, who, with ringing sound, promised to continue the drive to liquidate religion in the country.

The hall was decorated with anti-religious posters, including a huge photograph of Jewish members on the collective farms praying hard.

CHINESE SWORD IN WOUNDING CHARGE

A Chinese sword was produced at Old-street Police Court, one day last month, when Harry Gold, aged 32, of Butler-street, Shore-ditch, was charged on remand with maliciously wounding Ernest Williams by striking him with the sword.

Both charges were dismissed, but Gold was bound over for 12 months to keep the peace.

A police-constable said that he saw Williams outside a public house, pointing to Gold. He said: "This man has just wounded me with a sword."

When Gold was told he would be arrested, said the constable, he replied: "I had the sword to defend myself, as I thought they were going to do for me."

MYSTERY OF EASTER ISLAND SOLVED?

Honolulu, Mar. 16.

The "mystery" of Easter Island's colossal statues and the origin of its inhabitants has been lifted through matter-of-fact archaeological research, according to the Pan-Pacific Press bureau.

Dr. Alfred Metraux, French ethnologist who recently joined the staff of Honolulu's Bishop Museum, pointed out that the large statues which have puzzled observers since the first white men visited Easter could have been moved into place by hand.

The statues, Dr. Metraux was quoted as saying, weigh only five or six tons, and could easily have been moved from their local quarries and set in place on the seashore by hand labour. Four hundred men could drag them with ropes of native weaving.

As to the population of the island, which often has been described as the "lost continent" of the people of a "lost continent," Dr. Metraux advanced a theory of environmental modification of races common to the South Seas.

He suggested the Easter Islanders are related to the Maori of New Zealand and other Polynesians. According to his calculations, based on observation of variations in customs, he calculated they arrived on the island about the Twelfth century. Once established, he said, a lack of timber coupled with an abundance of "soft rock, easily carved, modified their culture."

The Easter Island script on wooden tablets which has long interested scientists and aroused considerable speculation was described by Dr. Metraux as not a true written language, but more likely a memory aid to assist in reciting tribal sacred legends.

Dr. Metraux visited Easter Island last year as a representative of the Paris Museum of Ethnology, with an expedition aboard the Belgian training ship Mercator. He joined the Bishop Museum, he said, for the advantages it offered in studying archaeological and ethnological history of the Pacific.—United Press.

50 LUXURY LINERS FOR BRITAIN

BIG BID FOR REAL SEA SUPREMACY

London, Mar. 15.

British shipping companies are set to spend £30,000,000 in the next two years on a fleet of fifty luxury liners to span the trade routes of the British Empire.

These do not include the sister ship to the giant "Queen Mary" which the Cunard-White Star is already tentatively planning to build, and two or three smaller faster ships which are reportedly under consideration to maintain a subsidiary service to the Queen Mary.

The first of the new fleet—the 25,100-ton Union Castle streamlined luxurious Motor Liner "Stirling Castle", largest motor vessel ever built in British shipyards—has just sailed from Southampton on her maiden voyage to the Cape of Good Hope.

In the shipbuilding yards of the Clyde, where the Queen Mary was constructed, two steamers for the Bombay service and a fruit-carrying passenger motor ship for Jamaica are presently nearing construction. On the Tyne a passenger and fruit-carrier motor ship and a similar vessel for South Africa are on the stocks. The 24,000-ton Orient passenger steamer Oradea is also being built at Barrow-in-Furness.

Belfast, until recently one of the hardest hit of all shipbuilding centres in Great Britain, is constructing eight passenger vessels for Empire routes. These include the 25,000-ton Athlone Castle for the South African run of the Union Castle line; two passenger and cargo motor ships for the Union Castle's Round-Africa service of 15,000 tons apiece; an 11,000-ton motor ship for an Australian company; and a 10,000-ton cargo and passenger motor ship for the Lamport and Holt service.

It is reported that the keels of other ships will also be laid in the near future.—United Press.

£10,000,000 ARMAMENTS ORDER

ROUMANIA'S CONTRACT WITH FRANCE

Paris, Mar. 6.
ROUMANIA has ordered armaments worth nearly £10,000,000 in France, according to a Bukarest message to the Agence Economique et Financiere explaining the Franco-Roumanian trade and financial agreement recently signed in Paris.

The principal aim of the treaty is to provide Roumania with sufficient francs to pay for the armaments, the interest on Roumanian loans issued on the Paris market, overdue instalments of commercial debts, and for other needs.

To facilitate transfer Roumania has consented to hand over to a French group for 12 years three-quarters of the State levy in kind on Roumanian petroleum. This guarantee is estimated to be worth from 80 to 100 million francs a year.

The contract for the sale of this levy has not yet been completed. It is to be signed in Bukarest before April 1.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

The trade and financial agreements, which will come into force only when the contract has been signed, provides that if Roumania finds financial resources to cover her armaments order, she can pay for these in three years, and thus regain free possession of the ceded portion of the petroleum levy.

The French Government has granted Roumania a small increase in import quotas for maize, barley, and certain dried vegetables.

In addition, France undertakes to buy from Roumania a quantity of petrol for aviation.

There are also certain adjustments with regard to commercial payments. Cash payment for French goods are reduced from 50 to 45 per cent. of their value, and payment on sums overdue from 10 to 5 per cent. Foreign currencies at the free disposal of Roumania are increased from 40 to 50 per cent. These various measures will procure another 20 to 22 million francs per annum.—Reuter.

GIRL RENOUNCES STAGE FAME FOR FORTUNE

FILMS AND RADIO BANNED, TOO

"OLD FASHIONED FATHER'S" DEATHBED WISH

BEAUTIFUL 21-years-old Betty Steele, of Belmont, Surrey—given the choice by her dying father—has decided to share a £64,000 fortune rather than seek fame on the stage.

Her father's ban extends to films, broadcasting, and the making of gramophone records.

"I have no intention of going on the stage—absolutely none," Miss Steele said.

"At school I had an interest in amateur theatricals and appeared occasionally," she went on.

"But it was only a passing fancy; gone for ever now."

GIRLISH BOAST

But up to the time of his death, Mr. Charles R. Steele, senior partner of Francis Miller and Steele, old-established solicitors, of Finsbury-square, E.C., remembered his daughter's girlish ambition. Her enthusiastic boast, four years ago "One day I am going to be a great stage star"—worried him to the day of his death.

"Father was very old-fashioned in his views on these things," Miss Steele declared. "He wished to be sure that my early interest in the stage would not be revived."

One of Mr. Steele's last actions was to add this, codicil to his will:

"Should she give, in public, any performance by way of acting, singing, dancing, playing any musical instrument or giving any performance with a

Headmaster Sent To Prison

He Tells Judge Of Experiment At Hotel

A HEADMASTER was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment at the Old Bailey this month for offences concerning boys.

The man, Stanley Charles Beresford, aged forty-two, was formerly headmaster of St. Augustine's College, Walton-on-Thames, which he founded in September, 1934.

The school was closed last December. Beresford pleaded not guilty to charges concerning four boys.

Mr. Laurence Vine, prosecuting, said the charges could conveniently be divided into three groups, all referring to boys less than sixteen years of age.

The first three charges related to a boy of ten, who, according to the prosecution, was taken by Beresford in a car to an hotel at East Grinstead.

Beresford signed the register "The Hon. C. B. Beresford and son."

The second group referred to incidents which, it was alleged, occurred in the dormitory of the school itself.

The third group concerned a boy at an hotel at Westcliff-on-Sea.

Beresford, in the witness-box, declared that he took one of the boys to the hotel at Westcliff because he wanted to prove that he could take a poor boy of elementary education for about three months and completely alter his outlook on life.

"FREEDOM"

Of his school, he said: "I believed in giving boys freedom and establishing a friendly relationship between masters and boys."

Beresford was found guilty of offences at East Grinstead and Westcliff and not guilty of offences at the school.

Judge Dodson, passing sentence, said the jury had tried to give Beresford the benefit of any possible doubt.

"The offences of which you have been found guilty are most grave because they affect the youth, and the youth of to-day is the manhood of to-morrow, on whom the responsibilities of citizenship rest," said the judge.

CEMETERY CHAPEL AS "REVOLTING" HORROR

Dean Says It Is Only Fit for the Burial of an Ass

A REMARKABLE attack on the local cemetery chapel is made by the Dean of Bocking (Essex), the Very Rev. Edgar Rogers.

Writing in his magazine, he says:

"It has been, I confess, a surprise to me to find how rarely the bodies of the faithful departed are brought to church on the way to burial—used as I have been in other parishes to that most Christian custom. I grieve that it is not usual in Bocking, and I grieve the more because the cemetery chapel is wholly unsuitable for any Christian rite."

"It is ugly, devoid of any sort of Christian symbol or propriety which can suggest that glory of our faith—the Resurrection of the Dead. I say deliberately it is, in my opinion, an offence to any decent Christian feeling, an insult to the departed, a needless aggravation of any mourner's grief and utterly unworthy of any community which cares for the honour and glory of God."

"It might be, as so many cemetery chapels are throughout the country, a shrine of comfort and peace, where not only on the day of a burial the hearts of mourners might be uplifted and the dreadful sorrow of bereavement eased, but all day and every day a tender and sacred spot, where prayer and recollection could unite the living and the dead."

"As it is, in its hideous and revolting horror, it adds to suffering and offers no more reverence than we would give to the burial of an ass."

"It is utterly repellent and hateful. There is no need for such disgrace. The cost of making it decent would be infinitesimal—a halfpenny or a penny on the rates for one single half year, would be

Undertakers' Charges

"Meanwhile, we urge that the bodies of Church people, reverencing as we do those bodies because, 'The Word was made flesh,' should always be brought to church and the heathen chapel at the cemetery avoided."

"I am told that some undertakers charge more if the body is taken to church. Very well, as a practical matter, patronise those firms who don't, and let us all make a determined set against the sheer indecency of the present cemetery chapel."

Does Not Agree

Mr. C. J. Baker, chairman of the Braintree and Bocking Council cemetery committee, when told of the Dean's criticism, said:

"I do not wish to enter into any controversy with the Dean, but I certainly do not agree with him. I take the view that if there is any complaint to be made it should be made either to my committee or to the council."

"The chapel in question is an old building and dates back to the days of burial boards."

Mr. Rogers, who has been Dean of Bocking since 1931, said: "Complaint has already been made. The Bishop of Chelmsford raised the matter with the council two years ago, but nothing has been done."

Iron Lung Has Kept Him Alive

San Francisco, Mar.
ONE of the most remarkable scientific experiments of all time is drawing to an unsuccessful close in Alameda County Hospital, California.

In April 1931 eighteen-year-old Raymond Rambo, suffering from infantile paralysis, was given up for dead. In a last effort to prolong his life doctors placed him in an "iron lung."

For 690 days a clanking respirator has pumped life-giving breath into young Raymond's wasted body.

Animal Goliath Conquered By A David

Denver, Colo., Mar. 10.

Posagawame is dead. And a David of the animal world is strutting around boasting of his conquest of a Goliath.

Frank C. Miller, owner of Trail's End ranch, 40 miles north of Fort Collins, Colo., on the Cache La Poudre river, told of the unexpected end of Posagawame, better known as Poss, leader of the buffalo herd maintained on the huge ranch.

Poss won leadership of the herd in 1931, after years of apprenticeship, by killing "Shorty," erstwhile chief.

Since that time Poss killed, in combat, three pretenders to the throne, two bull elk and two deer, besides an unknown number of smaller animals.

But recently Miller said he found Poss' body lying in the snow.

A postmortem examination was made and it was discovered that the "killer" had fallen victim to one of the most insignificant members of the animal kingdom, a porcupine.—United Press.

CHILDLESS WIFE'S TRAGIC DEVOTION

—Minister Husband

Northwood Hills (Middlesex), Mar. 1.
A YOUNG Congregational minister from Birmingham told, in the West Middlesex coroner's court here today, a tragic story of his wife's devotion and her longing for children she could never have.

The Rev. Herbert Alfred Hamilton, now living at Uphill Road, Mill Hill, described how four days ago he found his wife—fair haired, twenty-six-years old Mrs. Alice Winifred Hamilton, lying dead in front of a burning electric fire in an empty house in Joel-street, Northwood Hills, where for six months of last year they had lived together.

He said that soon after their marriage six years ago, his wife had an operation which prevented her from having children.

Specialist Care

A few months later another operation had to be performed, and three years ago he left Birmingham and came to London to put his wife in the care of a Harley-street specialist. She had been in consultation with him ever since.

"The mental strain on her was very severe," Mr. Hamilton explained. "She was very disappointed that she could not have children and also because she thought she was being a drag on me with her illness."

"We therefore adopted two children," he added. "She loved them very much indeed."

Charlie Gains A Gold Medal

New York, Mar. 15.

Charlie Chaplin has been awarded a gold medal by the League of Nations Cinema Committee in recognition of his activities as an international screen figure.

The committee, which represents fifty-three nations, voted the award unanimously. The secretary, notifying Mr. Chaplin, tells him he is "the greatest personality of the art of the cinema."—Reuter.

The coroner asked if Mrs. Hamilton had ever threatened to kill herself.

"She sometimes made threats of a theatrical kind when she was excited and feeling the need of me," Mr. Hamilton explained. "It was an inverted way of saying that she loved me."

Last September they separated, largely on the advice of the specialist. The inquest was adjourned for a month.

market: "The first-quarter profits of the automobile industry, excluding the Ford Company, may be 35 per cent. above those of last year. There is little reason to fear any liquidation of securities as a direct outcome of flood, but business will probably feel its effect for some weeks, hurting retail sales and also sales of automobiles. The chief threat to the market's steady advance is that the European idle money which is now heavily invested here might be withdrawn if the war threats end. In the meantime, the nearby outlook must be obscure until a definite volume of threat is made either through the high or the low points which were established earlier this month."

S. C. & F. New York office cables:

Stocks: Securities were in quiet demand and the market closed slightly higher. The Consolidated Gas Company proposes to register 70,000,000 3 1/2 per cent. 10-20 year refunding debentures. The Otis Elevator Company in 1935 earned 88 cents per share, against a loss of $1,000,000 the previous year. The Times business index for the past week is 94.5 as compared with 94.0 the previous week.

Cotton: The market is apparently well liquidated but it is dormant. The new crop programme and the disposal plan of Government stocks of cotton are lagging.

Wheat: An average of 70,000,000 bushels is estimated this year, the largest since 1923. Forecast of rains in the South-West has caused a bearish sentiment in spite of reported dust storms. The visible supply has decreased by 1,600,000 bushels here and decreased by 305,000 bushels in Canada. The visible supply of corn shows an increase of 330,000 bushels.

Rubber: The strike is now settled and normal operations are probable within a week.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, March 23.

Swan, Culbertson & Frits Wall summary of yesterday's market: "The market to-day was upward, with trading on the light side as traders are awaiting European developments. Farm implements were strong and utility issues were firm. Cement and construction shares were also strong on flood replacements. Steel stocks were up in spite of the fact that the Iron & Steel Institute placed mill operations at 55.0 per cent. of capacity on flood closures. Market news included many favourable factors. The Allied Chemical Company in 1935 earned $8.71 per share, against $6.83 the previous year. The Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation earned $2.03 per share against $2.25 in 1934, whilst the Anaconda Copper Mining Company in 1935 earned $1.29 per share, against 22 cents the previous year. The market for bonds was higher. Curb stocks were quiet."

OXO BEEF
in BRIEF

The giant British liner, Queen Mary, which is to leave her moorings in the Clyde for the first time to-day, proceeding down river for a distance of twenty-seven miles.

BRITISH POINT OF VIEW

Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, stated that in the course of his conversations with Herr von Ribbentrop he had emphasised the contents of the documents which had been communicated to him were in the nature of proposals.

"I made it clear His Majesty's Government hoped the German Government would be in a position to accept them, but that in any event His Majesty's Government felt the German Government should assist them in their task by making some constructive contribution to improve the situation.

"On my instructions, His Majesty's Ambassador in Berlin used similar language in an interview with the German Minister for Foreign Affairs yesterday."

Mr. Eden added that no reply had yet been received from the German Government.

Answering another question, the Prime Minister said the maintenance of the principle of sanctity of treaties was the main objective of the British Government. —British Wireless.

PEACE BRITAIN'S AIM

London, March 23.
Lord Halifax, who was one of the British delegates in the Four Power discussions both in Paris and London, deputed Mr. Anthony Eden at a meeting at Bristol to-night. He pressed the opinion that it has been the single desire of the whole country in the recent crisis to use its full influence for the preservation of European peace, and to build this peace upon the only possible foundation, namely, respect for treaties freely made, and mutual understanding. That, he asserted, put in its simplest terms, the very essence of British foreign policy.

Referring to the German case argued at the League in London, Lord Halifax said that there was much in it that would command sympathy in many quarters, but whatever sympathy Englishmen might have with the broad outlines of the German case, their constructive respect for law would always make them condemn action taken in direct violation of it.

FIRST DANGER PASSED

He went on to express understanding of feelings of anxiety and resentment aroused in Belgium and France by the German action in the dramatic zone. If, as he believed, the first danger was passed, it was due on the one hand to the restraint of France and Belgium, and on the other, to the untiring efforts of the British Foreign Secretary to secure a better understanding between Germany and Belgium and France, which had resulted in the proposals now before the world. They were not to be regarded as an ultimatum for Germany to accept, but if they were found unacceptable by the German Government in any respect, the other Powers were entitled to ask that the German Government should advance other proposals, not less effectual, constituting a real contribution by Germany to the cause of settlement which might rank with the contribution of restraint made by Belgium and France and the contribution to security made by the British Government.

The British declaration of complete adherence to the obligations of the Treaty of Locarno, and agreement to practical discussions of the means by which aid might be lent to those in case of unprovoked aggression, had been, he believed a real contribution to the creation of an atmosphere in which discussion could take place and peace be established. —British Wireless.

NO LOAN TO GERMANY

London, Mar. 23.
In the course of a Commons reply, the Financial Secretary to the Treasury stated that no credit or loan to the German Government or German Banks by the British Government or the Bank of England was in negotiation or contemplation. —British Wireless.

ART EXHIBITION

Mr. Lorenzo's Fine Display On View

The exhibition by Mr. Diosdado Magna Lorenzo, now being held at the Gloucester Hotel under the auspices of the Hongkong Working Artists' Guild comes in time to rescue the lack of art activities which had hitherto been so keen about six weeks ago. The show includes not a great number of paintings—50 in all—but it shows no less variety both in subject matter and in taste.

In all the landscapes shown, sunlight is the predominant feature. "Harvest Time" (No. 30) and "Buffalo" (No. 38) are superbly impressionistic in treatment with so much intensity of sunlight, at the same time exhibiting a feeling of solidity but rather enhancing it as in the case of the latter in which the buffalo silhouettes against the light.

In the street scenes, perhaps "Wanchai" (No. 10) is the most satisfactory. Notice the light cast on the street which leads us into the whole scene. The light and atmosphere are so truthful and yet so solid in substance.

"Hongkong from the Peak" (No. 15) has the atmosphere very characteristic of the Colony, while in "Harbour Railway" (No. 19) the colour harmony is seen at its best. I have purposely reiterated the correct atmosphere and solidity this artist has expressed in his work, firstly because these are the very qualities I have been looking for in vain in the past and which were lacking in the work of Mr. Feng H. Chiu whose one-man show it will be recalled, was held in the same place two months ago; and, secondly, because the subject under review does not, as in the case of the latter artist, use one and the same formula in dealing with his subjects painted in different places, but has expressed his personal feeling of different places in a way far from being conventional.

PECULIAR COLOUR SCHEME

In "Bird's Eye View of Rome" (No. 29) we notice another aspect in which the artist paints this picture. Here a peculiar colour scheme, in which red and green greys predominate, is employed. One admires the heavy impact of so tellingly on the canvas. Such heavy emphasis, however, distracts from the charming effect in "Philippine Native Home" (No. 47) in that the heavy white pigment loaded thickly on a sky tends to come forward to compete with the centre of interest immediately below. In "Casita" (No. 30) the artist is seen in his happiest and most thrilling moment. The composition in "Pantheon (Rome)" (No. 26) is rather unusual and dramatic.

In "Oriental Fruits No. 1" the firm brush work is rendered in its utmost simplicity and complete satisfaction. Finally, the portraiture. The "Portraits of Mr. A. N. Macfadyen" (No. 7) and "The Hon. M. K. Lo" (No. 1) have all the fine draughtsmanship that can be expected from the oil medium. In the latter portrait, however, the foreshortening legs is not very convincing. "Portrait Study of a Sailor" (No. 9) is a sketch done with economy of effort, a point rarely reached in most of the academic work. Among the artist's latest developments in this field we can wisely compare these with his earlier work—to take at random "East and West" (No. 10) in which a young and an old lady are depicted. In the latter picture the colour is employed more sparingly and the treatment impressionistic; whereas in his latest portraiture he has developed in a stage more harmony in colour scheme and more vital in treatment.

Mr. Lorenzo has not yet reached the top of his achievement. In the matter of composition and colour harmony he has yet to develop to the full what he will do so I am certain considering his youth.—LUI CHAN, of the Hongkong Artists' Guild.

VIRTUAL ALLIANCE

Rome, Mar. 23.
Italy, Austria and Hungary have signed a tri-power agreement which, it is understood, makes Italy the virtual guarantor of Austria's independence, regardless of what may happen and even in the event of a German attempt to dominate Austria. The agreement reaffirms and prolongs the engagement made by the three powers in 1934 and strengthens the political and economic relations to an extent which makes the treaty approximate to a system of mutual assistance. However, Hungary has declined to agree to aid Austria in the event of that country being attacked.

It is understood Italy promises to support Hungary's demand for revision of the World War treaties and territorial adjustment, at the projected European conference this summer. —United Press.

LADY RESIDENT'S DEATH

MRS. EGGE PASSES IN HOSPITAL

The death occurred at the French Hospital at 2.30 this morning of Mrs. Felicia E. Egge, after an illness of about a month. She had resided in the Colony for fourteen years.

The deceased, who was 35 years of age, was the wife of Mr. W. Egge, manager of Messrs. Kunst and Albers, Pedder Building, for whom much sympathy will be felt.

The funeral takes place this afternoon, passing the Monument, Happy Valley at 5.15 p.m. Prior to interment a Russian Orthodox service will be held in the cemetery chapel.

Now Bright And Cheerful!

She Had St. Vitus' Dance.

"My daughter suffered so badly from St. Vitus' Dance that she was always jumping and twitching," says Mrs. Kirkbright, of 3, Harcourt Street, Leeds. "Lillian is 15½ years old, and as the trouble developed she lost control of her left arm. Later the trouble spread to her legs and it seemed impossible for her to keep a limb still. She could not even feed or wash herself."

"Despite treatment, Lillian made no progress, and then one day I read of a girl having been cured of St. Vitus' Dance by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I sent for a bottle at once, and Lillian showed some improvement after taking the pills for a few days. Soon the jumping and twitching ceased, she grew bright and cheerful, and became quite normal again."

Not only for St. Vitus' Dance, but for nervous debility, sleeplessness, rheumatism, indigestion, or any ailment due to poor blood, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable. The reason is this: these pills create new, rich blood, which brings with it new health, new vigour and strong nerves. Try them now—but ask for Dr. Williams'. Sold by chemists everywhere.

IS THE COLONY
LIGHTLY TAXED?

A favourite argument by Government spokesmen that Hongkong is a lightly-taxed Colony was again heard during the debate on administrative costs in the Legislative Council on Thursday. In support of the theory, figures were cited comparing taxation here with the standards prevailing in Singapore and at Home. On the former point, it was shown that the assessed tax in Singapore is on a basis of 24 per cent., as against 17 per cent. in Hongkong. But before any safe deductions can be drawn from these figures it would be essential to know how property values compare between Singapore and Hongkong—in other words, whether rental standards are approximately the same, inasmuch as the assessed tax is based on rents. Until this point is cleared up, there is not much utility in comparing assessed tax percentages. So far as the respective positions between the United Kingdom and Hongkong are concerned, it would appear idle to make comparisons, for the simple reason that the conditions existing in the two places are in no sense similar. The standard of living of the majority of the people there bear no relation to that of the average taxpayer here in Hongkong. Admittedly, it would not be difficult to show that specific sections of the Colony's community get off relatively lightly in the matter of taxation. The well-to-do and the very poor, the last-named of whom either pay no regular rent or are accommodated in bed-spaces or cubicles, are not unduly taxed. Equally, Government servants and others who enjoy free quarters or house allowances get off lightly. But between these groups there is a big section of the community which finds it hard to meet the burden of taxation. In this connection, we have to bear in mind the overcrowded labour market, which has a direct bearing on this matter of taxation. If rents go up, carrying enhanced taxation, the worker cannot expect to get recompense in the way of higher wages; he is at the mercy of the landlord in such circumstances. There are many other aspects of the question which could be cited to show the danger of making comparisons with other centres where the conditions are dissimilar. Generally speaking, however, it must surely be realised by the Government that the present is no time in which to contemplate any addition to the existing scale of taxation. The community as a whole, therefore, sincerely trusts that the official submission that we

TROUBLED RHINE WATERS.

THE Rhineland is Germany's western province, which the French in their hour of might sought, and failed, to carve out of the Reich; from which they thought to have removed the sting by the demilitarisation clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, incorporated in the Locarno protocols; and on which they now turn a gaze of growing and tragic anxiety.

In the Rhineland the French and German general staffs do not see merely a pleasant and wealthy tract of Europe. They do not hear the good Rhine flowing in the heart of all Allemagne. They see it as a vital strategic factor in a battle still unfought.

To the French generals, the west, or left, bank of the Rhine is simply a base of concentration for a German attack on France. Germany has a foot on the French side of the ditch, a stronghold within the defences which nature designed for the protection of France.

The Germans point out that some millions of indubitable German subjects dwell on the wrong side of this "natural frontier."

A fortnight after the Armistice Marshal Foch presented a demand for the separation from Germany of the entire left bank of the Rhine, coupled with a permanent occupation by French troops of the bridge-heads on the right bank.

When Foch's plan was rejected, the French sought the same end by other means. Clemenceau believed that the Treaty of Versailles gave him what he wanted.

"In fifteen years," he told Poincare, "Germany will not have fulfilled the clauses of the treaty. If you will do me the honour to visit my grave, you will be able to tell me, 'We stand on the Rhine and we remain on the Rhine.'"

NOTES OF THE DAY

COLONY DEFENCES

It is interesting to discover that Hongkong's defence forces are a match for a fair-sized enemy force which might attempt to take the island by landing troops without preliminary bombardment on a large scale, and that even should such a force of invaders gain the beaches and the more rugged interior country, they could be driven back into the sea by the fierce counter-attacks of the reserves (including the Volunteers) and such of those who survived the first struggle on the beaches. It is gratifying to know that the Colony's defence forces are efficient, well-organised and keen on the job, and that in the face of an ordinary attack from the sea, with naval artillery fire supporting the landing parties, they can give a good account of themselves. However, the official reports of lessons learned in the recent manoeuvres give us no room for complacency. It appears that, in the event of a sustained and "ferocious" attack by enemy aircraft, Hongkong would suffer severely; and the inference may be drawn that were this aerial offensive maintained long enough, the ultimate assault from the sea might find the defenders sadly depleted and their resistance much weakened. We are therefore pushed to the conclusion that anti-aircraft defence is the vital spot in Hongkong's armour, and that any weakness in this direction must be remedied before we are in a position to defend ourselves with real hope of success. For it is most improbable that in any attempted invasion of Hongkong aircraft would not play a major part. In this connection let it be noted that Singapore has taken steps to augment its volunteer anti-aircraft defence force materially. We suggest there is material among the men of this Colony for the organisation of a similar body, a complementary unit of men to be trained to work with the Royal Air Force in garrison.

have not reached the limit of taxation does not imply any intention of adding to the present burden. Any such move would meet with instant condemnation. The remedy for the Colony's present plight obviously lies in the direction of reducing expenditure, not in seeking means for the raising of more revenue.

"... the good Rhine flowing"

By George Malcolm Thomson

But this French complacency reigned in Germany and the morale of the people was at a low ebb, a second and more dangerous separatist attempt was launched.

This time the French had prepared the ground for their separatist friends. Propaganda had been busy among the Rhineland people. They were "Celts, like us," French newspapers, magazines, and soup kitchens stressed the contrast of a distracted Germany and a strong, friendly France.

Besides, there was the tempting bait of escape from reparations payments.

In the autumn of 1923, when German resistance on the Ruhr had collapsed, the Separatists launched their "putsch." Their leaders were Matthes, who had at one time run a Communist paper at Frankfurt, a German named Deckers, who commanded in Aix, Dr. Dorten, and a picturesque adventurer who was called Captain Parsival.

The rank and file, as usual in such adventures, consisted partly of ruffians and partly of honest men.

The red, white and green tricolour of the Rhineland was resurrected from the museums where it had lain since the days of the French Revolution and hoisted by the Separatist storm troops in Wiesbaden, Crefeld, Aix and Coblenz.

But from the first it was evident that French propaganda and French bribes had failed to win over the Rhinish population.

After a few weeks' precarious existence, the Rhineland republic collapsed, to the savage joy of the local inhabitants, who, at Pirmasens, set fire to the building in which the Separatists had taken refuge.

France's second attempt to solve the military problem of the Rhineland had failed.

THE third was Locarno. From the point of view of the French general staff this was a compromise. It involved a free acceptance by the German Government of the permanent demilitarisation of the left bank of the river and of a strip 30 miles wide on the right bank.

On the other hand, it envisaged an early withdrawal of the French garrison. But this was compensated for by the guarantee by Britain and Italy of France's frontier against unprovoked attack.

It seemed that at last the problem was solved. France, with immense new fortifications defending her soil, looked out on a German zone empty of soldiers, naked of offensive works.

Germany, on the other hand, felt easier in mind now that the menace, the very real menace, of the Separatist movement, was at an end.

But the long struggle for the strategic mastery of the Rhineland has not ended in a victory for France.

And, even if the Rhineland were not rearmament, what, it may be asked by the French generals, is a 30-mile demilitarised zone in these days of tanks and mechanised heavy guns which could cross it in an hour?

What is the value of the neutralised Rhineland when a sudden secret mobilisation could transform a million Rhinish civilians into a million marching Reichswehrmen in a few hours?

1911-1936: AVIATION IN HONGKONG

EXACTLY twenty-five years ago this week the first aviator to fly in Hongkong took off at Shatin and, amidst the jubilation of thousands of people who assembled to witness his daring feat, succeeded in flying a distance of 200 yards!

The flight was made on March 18, 1911 by Mr. Van den Born, a Belgian. To-day, just over 25 years later, the Imperial Airways liner Dorado inaugurates a commercial service that brings Hongkong within 26 hours of Penang, and within ten days of London.

The S. C. M. Post of March 20, 1911, reported:

"Keen disappointment was manifested by a large number of people who assembled at Shatin on Saturday afternoon (March 18) to witness the exhibition of flying promised by Mr. Van den Born. It was a beautiful day and high hopes were entertained of witnessing the latest of the arts of locomotion under the best of circumstances. There was some delay at the outset on account of the late arrival of His Excellency the Governor, and when His Excellency did arrive it was found that the wind had risen too high to permit of flying. The machine was taken out of the shed, however, and the working of the motor displayed, but it was decided that it would be folly to attempt to rise in the teeth of a gale blowing about 30 miles an hour. The people hung round impatiently, and most of them were glad when the 5.10 train started for home, for, although the band of the Rajputs did its best to enliven matters, nothing would have induced the crowd to wait longer.

The First flight in Hongkong.

"As it happened, the wind front of the hangar and, upon observing this, a large number of those present, the majority of whom were school children from Queen's College and other institutions, rushed to the spot. Seeing the danger of a collision and possibly injury to some of the more reckless of the spectators, Mr. Van den Born with great presence of mind (for he was travelling at considerable speed) swerved his machine clear. This left him too little distance in which to make for the shed, and the result was a collision in which the forepart of the machine was considerably crumpled. No injury resulted to the motor, fortunately, and Mr. Van den Born himself escaped with but a few slight bruises."

On March 27 he again made several successful ventures into the air—aviation was an accomplished fact in the Colony. The aviator then went on to Canton, and gave a most successful exhibition there in April.

Marble Sunk In 1881 Raised By Sanctions

Bowcombe Creek, near Kinsbridge, South Devon, Mar. 13. THE shore of this little creek is to-day ringing with the sound of chain and tackle, sledge hammers and the popping of a little motor-winch.

Lying in the mud of the low-tide level are half a dozen large seaweed-covered blocks. On the shore, scrubbed and polished to a glistening whiteness, there are more of these great squares.

Passers-by hardly give a glance at the eight or nine workmen who are busying themselves among these sea-shore Stonehenge. But those workmen are pulling treasure worth thousands of pounds out of the sea, beneath which it has lain defying all efforts at salvage since 1881—for those great stones are pure Italian marble.

It is sanctions that is bringing them to the sea surface at last.

Fifty-five years ago a small Italian sailing vessel battled with a gale off the Devon coast. She carried more than two hundred tons of Italian marble for delivery to a London merchant. But the gale beat the Volvere, as she was called, a few miles off Salcombe. She was smashed on treacherous rocks. The captain's wife, put ashore on the rocks, was washed back into the sea. The whole crew were drowned.

Attempts failed. The two hundred or more tons of marble sank to the sea bed. After the underwriters had finished with the wreck six local fishermen bought it. They salvaged small pieces of marble and more than one hundred tons of good walnut wood, and then sold the wreck to a Plymouth merchant, who lost about £600 trying to salvage the marble.

More than thirty years ago he sold the wreck again to Mr. James Distin, of Salcombe, who salvaged wood and copper from it, and this is where Mr. R. H. Partridge, of Salcombe, steps in.

Four years ago the wreck and marble were transferred to him. With the aid of a diver and after a fight against the silted-up sea bed, the weather and a collision, 100 tons of marble were eventually tied to the bottom of a barge and brought ten miles to be dropped to the bed of this creek.

CUSTOMS' CLAIM
Sanctions came, affecting the supplies and price of marble.

A week ago the first of the great blocks of marble was dragged ashore, but Mr. Partridge has had to fight against more than the weather and the sea bed. The Customs impounded the marble and claimed £150 duties.

Mr. Partridge proved that as the marble came within the three-mile limit at a time when there was no duty on marble he need pay no duty. It was claimed by the Government as treasure trove. Mr. Partridge traced its ownership through the fifty-five years to himself.

Now, sanctions and duty-free, the marble is at last being landed.

Says Mr. Partridge: "It has cost me £800 to get this 100 tons of marble this far. I do not know exactly what I shall get for it. I know that at present it is worth about £1,500. The value will probably go up."

"It depends on my success with this gamble—for that is all it is—whether or not I shall salvage the other 100 tons or so that still lie in the wreck."

CORRESPONDENCE

Civil Servants' Salaries

(To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph)

Sir,—In the last Budget debate and in the various reports of the Retirement Committee and Salaries Commission, one salient point was apparently overlooked and that is: The principle of paying all salaries and expenses in the same currency as the revenue of the Colony is collected.

The salaries of all officers or Civil Servants whether recruited in England or locally should be fixed and paid in Hongkong Currency thereby eliminating the danger of speculation in exchange and unbalanced budgets occasionally.

The Colony's finances should not be subjected to the vagaries and fluctuations of exchange. Nothing could be more illuminating and convincing than the following broad facts. During the last 50 years the highest rate of exchange was quoted in 1920 at 6/2 and the lowest rate was quoted in 1931 at 10/4d. per dollar.

The difficulty of balancing the Colony's budgets under such conditions is quite obvious and requires no explanation.

In the course of his pertinent remarks, Mr. Lo brought to the notice of the public that 60% of the Colony's revenue goes to the salaries based at 1s. 8d. What would be left of the total revenue should the rate of exchange drop to 1 shilling per dollar?

The Salaries Commission appointed on the 10th. October, 1928, considered that the salaries of officers, ordinarily recruited in England, should continue to be quoted in sterling while an officer recruited in England or other country having a gold standard.

Things have changed since, and England is off the gold standard. It would be preferable to abstain from indulging in long-drawn arguments causing tedious reading, as the value of such a letter lies in its brevity.

This is a mere suggestion apart from any recommendation for the reduction of salaries paid officers without impairing the high efficiency of the Administration.

CABARET GIRLS' DISPUTE

ACADEMY'S CLAIM IN COURT

HEARING RESUMED

The hearing of a claim against two cabaret girls, which is in the nature of a test case to force the return of dancing tickets to the proprietor of the Academy, was resumed before Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden at Supreme Court to-day, after a lapse of over two months.

The plaintiff was Mr. Dennis Victor, proprietor of the Lido Dancing Academy, and the defendants were two former employees, Dora To and Liu Phil-yuk.

The first defendant, Dora To, was sued for $472 of which sum $10 was for money lent and the remainder was for 301 dancing tickets, valued at 25 cents each, less 50 per cent. commission.

The claim against the second defendant was for $33.12, in respect of which $10 was for money lent and the rest for 185 tickets, less 50 per cent. commission.

While each admitted having borrowed $10, both defendants denied that the dancing tickets were the property of the plaintiff, and put in counter-claims for $13.75 and $14.62 respectively, being 50 per cent. commission on the tickets which they alleged they had obtained while working in the Academy.

Mr. M. A. da Silva appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. G. S. Ford, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, was for the defendants.

It was stated at a previous hearing that although the amount involved was inconsiderable, the action was brought because there had been many cases of cabaret girls retaining the tickets and converting them to their own use.

THE SYSTEM
The system of employing dancing partners, as practised by most of the girls, was agreed to be a commission basis, although in some of them there was the question of salary. In the present case the defendants were not employed on a salary basis but only on commission, namely 50 per cent. of every ticket they obtained from customers. These tickets were valued at 25 cents each.

The proprietor of a dancing academy sold the tickets to the customers who in turn gave them to the girls after they had danced together. After the night's work was over, the girls were to return the tickets to the proprietor, who entered them up in a book against their names and gave them the commission every fifteen days. The girls were entitled to only 50 per cent. of every ticket obtained from customers. They received them in the capacity of agents for the proprietor.

Mr. Victor, who had given evidence before, was cross-examined this morning. He agreed that the tickets were lost or destroyed by the girls, he would receive the full value of them, as he sold the tickets to the customers. On the face of this, it would appear that he was claiming for an extra 25 cents and a half cent when he had already received 25 cents for each of the missing tickets.

Witness said that first defendant had returned 80 tickets to him since the last hearing of the case, her share of these tickets amounting to $10, which wiped off the money lent.

SOME DISCREPANCIES
Mr. Ford suggested that it was impossible for the checking system, whereby a clerk jotted down the dances he saw each girl take, to be efficient. There were several discrepancies in the checking book. In one case the second defendant's dances added up to 11 and the clerk made it 21. The girls, defendant agreed, had no counter-check.

Witness said the sale of tickets in one night ranged from 300 to 2,000. The hearing is proceeding.

K Shoes Lead a Double Life

Plus fitting. Shoes last about twice as long as you would expect a pair of shoes to last unless you are already a K Shoe wearer. Some shoes look cheap from the price ticket, but they always look cheaper still in wear. But the quality of K Shoes is unmistakable. It's the extra value built into them, that makes them the best bargain in the long run.

Let us show you K Plus Fitting Shoes, the shoes that are made with the heelparts one fitting narrower than the foreparts (see diagram) thus ensuring a perfect fit. Close at the heel, easy across the toes.

FIRST DEFEAT OF INVINCIBLE BADMINTON TEAM

Eliot Hall "A" Bow Before Inspired Recreio

PTE. E. NIELSON

East Lanes' Champion

Regarded by many as the most outstanding amateur Services boxer in Hongkong, Pte. Nielson of the East Lancashire Regiment promises to be one of the chief contenders for the Hongkong Area Welterweight boxing championship next month.

In 1934, his first year in Hongkong, Pte. Nielson was runner-up in the Area welterweight championship after putting up one of the best performances of the programme. It needed a casting vote by the referee before a verdict could be reached in the final scrap, and before giving this the referee complimented both Nielson and his opponent on their fine display and ordered an extra round to be fought.

HE HAD REVENGE

The winner was none other than Pte. Roberts of the South Wales Borderers, a primo favourite with local fight enthusiasts. At that time Roberts reigned supreme and was regarded as unbeatable at his weight.

To-day's Tennis Programme

Two open championship matches are arranged for this afternoon at the Cricket Club.

S. A. Rumjahn will meet Frank Kwok and will be the first to reach the last eight stage of the open singles. Kwok's rigid defence may prolong the match, although it is doubtful whether he can avoid a straight sets defeat.

A. W. Ramsay and Gordon Burnett, who played rather disappointingly in their first round of the doubles, meet the Tsui brothers. The Chinese are playing well at the present and a comfortable win for them is indicated.

Complete programme follows.
Open Singles (Third Round)
S. A. Rumjahn v F. H. Kwok.
Open Doubles (Second Round)
A. W. Ramsay and G. Burnett v W. P. Tsui and Y. P. Tsui.

Club Championships (First Round)
Lt. Cdr. Stanfield v Capt. W. J. R. Cragg.
Club Handicap Singles
Lt. W. P. Lory v S. P. Bathurst-3/6.
Lt. W. A. R. Grant-15/2 v E. H. Williams-3/6.

J. Thomson-1/6 v T. A. Pearce-15.
(Second Round)
T. J. Price v R. O'M. Deane-4/6.
Club Handicap Doubles
(First Round)
Y. R. Gordon and A. H. Penn-1/6 v H. R. Butters and D. Macdonald-4/6.

(Second Round)
C. G. Stark and P. A. Joseph-2/6 v T. C. Monaghan and E. J. McCallister-3/6.

TENNIS TRIUMPH FOR MISS YORKE

Three Titles Won By English Girl

London, Mar. 23. Miss A. M. ("Billie") Yorke, the English international tennis player, has achieved a personal triumph in the Egyptian lawn tennis tournaments winning all three titles.

After annexing the singles, she won the women's doubles with Miss Joan Ingram and the mixed with G. P. Hughes, the English Davis Cup star.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

ENGLAND WINS AT HOCKEY

London, March 23. England outplayed Wales today in an international hockey match and won by four goals to one.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

TACTICS WHICH BROUGHT ABOUT THEIR DEFEAT

PLAY-OFF FOR THE TITLE WILL BE NECESSARY

(By "Veritas")

Last evening Recreio "A" men's doubles badminton team accomplished something which, for the past two years, everybody has said was impossible; they beat Eliot Hall "A", Colony champions, in a badminton league match. In consequence (unless Recreio unexpectedly lose a match) there will have to be a play-off for the men's doubles league title on a date and a venue yet to be settled.

Well over 200 badminton enthusiasts crowded Club de Recreio for this match which signalled the first defeat sustained by Eliot Hall "A" since the start of the Hongkong league. They were rewarded with the finest match ever seen in the Colony.

WHY THEY WON

Recreio won because they were shrewd enough to change their tactics. Eliot Hall, whose badminton has been nurtured on forecourt play—a type of game in which they stand supreme in Hongkong—discovered they had to defend the base of the court. It was a new experience, and although they tried hard to adapt themselves to the requirements of this form of play, they could not sustain a defence against the fast moving and hard hitting Portuguese.

When Eliot Hall did get their opportunities of dictating the exchanges they exploited drop shots for all they were worth and had Recreio outplayed. But the home players invariably returned to lob high and deep from corner to corner, get the Varsity men on the run, and dash in for the final cross-court "kill".

It is questionable whether such fine driving was so much of it. In one match has been seen before in Hongkong. All of the players were up to concert pitch and covered the court with remarkable agility and speed. When it came to scoring direct from driving, the teams shared the honours, but Recreio benefited to a greater extent in the long run as their swift and well placed drives often paved the way for a winning smash.

THE HEROES

For the winners, L. A. Carvalho and A. M. Silva were the heroes. They showed all the signs of a fine demonstration of forceful and fighting badminton in each. Silva, always methodical and unflinching, created most of the openings by his subtle placements, while Carvalho, alert and eager, performed prodigious feats of overhead-smashing.

C. O. Lee and K. L. Yung were the best among the losers. Lee, boasting a beautifully stylish backhand, commanded the base of the court and very nearly found the right answer to the Recreio's tactics. His cleverest shot was a high and deep lob taken on the backhand as the opposition advanced to the net. It scored heavily against Alves and Sousa.

Recreio also owed a lot to Dick Alves and Eddie Sousa, who, frankly speaking, were not expected to win more than one game. But they came up trumps in their second encounter when they not only beat Eliot Hall first string but, in so doing won the match.

Here again the methods of attack were deep drives and lobs to the corners and a quick follow-in for the "kill". Only Lee and Yung found the right answer to this type of game.

Not unnaturally the players were somewhat affected by the importance of the occasion, but Recreio settled down very much quicker than Eliot Hall, who subsequently failed to recover from an early shock of being led two games to one at the end of the first round.

MOST EXCITING GAME

To the delight of their supporters Recreio went to a 4-2 lead and then Sousa and Alves, making the most of their advantage of being up against rattled opponents, won the seventh game for the match. Eliot Hall recovered to win the eighth, but Carvalho and Silva refused to be denied a distinction, not hitherto enjoyed by any other pair, I believe, of winning all three games against the champions.

Easily the most exciting game of the evening was the second between Carvalho and Silva and C. O. Lee and K. L. Yung. Recreio held on to a single ace lead up to 17-10 and then obtained game point with Eliot Hall couple at 10. At this point services were lost by means of some dazzling returns. Three times service crossed the net without any alteration to the score, and then Recreio snatched the one ace for a thrilling win.

Detailed scores follow. J. Remedios (Recreio "A") lost to T. C. Lee and

RUMJAHNS IN FINE FORM BRIGHT TENNIS YESTERDAY

(By "Veritas")

Effortless and flawless tennis, for which the Rumjahns cousins hold the Hongkong copyright reserved, brought about the defeat yesterday in straight sets of J. Goncalves and H. A. Barros, when they met in the second round of the open doubles championship. The cousins thus join Fincher and Hung and Crawford and Gray in the last eight.

Notwithstanding a very much below-form display by Barros, the Rumjahns found sufficient inspiration in the opposition offered by Goncalves to reveal their wide range of stroke command. The harder Goncalves hit—and his driving was far excellent—the better the Rumjahns volleyed and half-volleyed. Aspiring title-snatchers had good reason to ponder over their task if they watched the champions in action yesterday.

CHAMPION IN THE MAKING

But one expects to see the Rumjahns exhibit a high class brand of tennis, and although it is true they dominated the court, they could not entirely obscure the frequent clever play of Goncalves, who, if I am not mistaken, is a Club de Recreio champion in the making.

It is true he committed a lot of errors, notably in the second set when the hot pace seemed to be throwing his strokes. But earlier on he constantly flashed out a sparkling shot—a perfectly placed passing drive on the forehand or an unreturnable volley going away down the "tramlines." These were shots of a potentially very good player and gave some idea of the advancement made by Goncalves during the past twelve months.

It was a pity Barros found the occasion rather too big for him. In the opening phases he was making all sorts of unnecessary volleying errors, due entirely to his taking the ball too early. He improved in the second set but not sufficiently to make a balanced combination strong enough to win more than three games from the champions.

The Rumjahns played ideal tennis for the occasion. They will meet stiffer opposition later on, but while they can function so smoothly they have little cause to worry. They volleyed very decisively, H. D. Rumjahn in particular regaining his old-time skill.

DISAPPOINTING SINGLES

The three singles matches played yesterday did not offer the same brand of tennis. Wong Fuk-nam certainly extended Leonard in the second set and had it in his power to force the fastidious distance. But after breaking through to lead 5-3, he lost his own service and then withered before a player who was rock-like in his steadiness. Leonard, his ground strokes working with meticulous accuracy won many points on Wong's faults, but he also scored heavily with some delightful passing shots on

CRICKET NOTES

SPOTTING "STARS" AT KING'S PARK

QUINNELL IS A GOOD BOWLER

(By R. Abbi)

Although last Saturday was a much nicer day than we have had for weeks there was practically no cricket as the combined operations took up the activities of most of the players.

It was unfortunate, but these things have to be done or how could the Military Contribution be justified? But after dodging borders of accoutred soldiers, festooned with the weapons of their trade I managed to get across to Kowloon hotly pursued by what looked like a section of our excellent St. John Ambulance Brigade and a few others who looked like nothing on earth.

I finally arrived at the K.C.C. to discover if there was a Club game by any chance but found the ground covered by gallant men and fair ladies playing tennis. Thence to the Naval Sports ground where at last my cars were cheered by the sound of the bat hitting the ball. I gathered that the Empress of Britain had fielded a side against what was available of the Navy auxiliaries—technical casualties no doubt in the early hours of the morning (or were they here out of the sun? Too bad, too bad!) Anyway there was quite an enjoyable game. I did not get there in time to see the start but I managed to achieve one object and that was to see Quinnell in action. He has rather a curious delivery which I imagine may make the flight of the ball puzzling, but I think I know the ball that gets most of his wickets—a perfect length one which seems to flick faster than the others and just flicks the top of the stumps.

He produced two of them in quick succession at the end of the Empire's innings and they would have bowled a good deal better batsmen than the ones they did actually dismiss. Thanks to their first two batsmen the Empress team won comfortably but the rest of the side were not very skilful. But the flight of the ball, however, which had evidently been a celerator in the days of his youth—I think he was probably on the wrong side of fifty, but he scorned gloves and pads and made one of the nicest old-fashioned square hits to leg that I have seen for years. (I am writing this in the pious hope that the Empress will have moved on before it appears in print.)

I umpired for a few minutes in this game, at the end, and was interested in seeing how the ball was taking spin on a rather loosely stretched bit of matting.

CLUB GAMES

Both the Indians and Craigengower managed to get in scratch games on their own ground but I am afraid I know nothing more of them beyond what has appeared in the papers.

THE MATCH OF MATCHES

I cannot quite recollect if I said that the K.C.C.-University match was to be played at Kowloon on 28th March. There was some such idea, I believe. I shall deal with the game next Friday—when I hope to have got a little more material and a little less cold and cough, but I may as well state now that the same will be played at the originally staged venue—the University ground at Pokfulam.

M. A. Oliveira, who contributed to the success of the Recreio team.

NEW BALL

WILL PROVE BOON TO GOLFERS

U.S.A. USING IT

Many of the worries of golfers in circumference, is generally adopted. Throughout America it is used extensively, and V. S. Richardson, upon return from the United States with the Australian team, says that, though it might not cure that slice or hook, it certainly made the game more enjoyable.

The new American ball is 5-16ths of an inch bigger in circumference than the standard Australian ball, but weight is the same.

From the tee, according to Richardson, it gets into the air more quickly, flies better, and, on landing, stops in a shorter distance, especially on the greens. On good fairways it "sits up" and begs to be hit.

Richardson said that in U.S.A. he had picked up many hints, and the best had to do with the swing. "They are concentrating on a firm left side," he said, "forcing the club away from the body and turning their right hip away, instead of swaying. When the club comes through, their left side is perfectly firm, the left hip going into the swing a fraction of a second before the moment of impact."

"At the same time there is no cocking of wrists, as we have been accustomed to see in Australia—just a slight turn, which means that they have a maximum of control throughout the entire swing."

"Their chief object, however, is to keep the left side firm, and to keep the club on a firm base. I doubt if it is of great advantage." "Instead of starting to pivot at the start of the swing, the pivot does not begin until the left arm has been forced back."

Richardson intends to make this style the basis of his future golf.

NEW SOCCER STAR ON VIEW TO-DAY

Tio Hian-Gwin Playing For South China "A"

PLAYER SUSPENDED

WONG MEE-SHUN OUT OF SOCCER FOR FORTNIGHT

The Emergency Committee of the Hongkong Football Association sat yesterday evening to consider the case of Wong Mee-shun the centre-half of the South China "A" team, who was ordered off the field during the match against the Kowloon F.C. on March 14 last.

After inquiring into the circumstances of the case, the Emergency Committee decided to suspend this player for two weeks as from yesterday.

P. K. Chan 17-21; lost to C. O. Lee and K. L. Yung 18-21; beat K. S. Liew and K. Y. Lee 21-17.
L. A. Carvalho and A. M. Silva (Recreio "A") beat Lee and Chan 21-10; beat Lee and Yung 21-19; beat Liew and Lee 21-12.
E. da Sousa and H. A. Alves (Recreio "A") beat Lee and Chan 21-18; lost to Lee and Yung 8-21; beat Liew and Lee 21-15.

POINTS CONCEDED

Kowloon Tong have conceded a walk-over to Recreio "A" in their match scheduled for to-morrow and a walk-over to Eliot Hall "B" in their match fixed for next week. The amended league table therefore reads.

INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY

Local Tournament Final On Sunday

The final of the local International Hockey tournament will be played between England and Portugal on Sunday on the Royal Naval Recreation Club ground, King's Park at 10.30 a.m.

12 RUNS FROM ONE HIT

Christchurch, N.Z.

Somewhat unusual was the tally placed against a batsman's name in the scoring book for one hit, the figure 12 going down without the ball being lost. The stroke originally was worth two, two overthrows were run, then three more, a total of seven so far. On this last occasion however, a fieldman stopped the ball with his cap, and, of course, under Law 41, a penalty of a further five runs was exacted, thus bringing the grand total to 12.

England, who will play in red, will be represented by the following:—A. B. Owen; J. E. Potter and Bds. F. Cox; Lieut. J. P. Williams (Capt.), W. A. Reed and J. Farmer; S. A. Fowler, G. E. R. Dwyer, Sub-Lieut. Wraith, Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite, and Flight-Lieut. Lascelles.

TRIANGULAR HOCKEY TOURNEY

Deciding Match On Monday Next.

The deciding match in the Triangular Hockey Tournament will be staged on the Marine ground between the Army and the Hongkong Hockey Club on Monday, March 30, at 4.30 p.m. The Army will be represented by the following players:—Sapper Howlett; Bds. P. Cox and Kishan Singh; Sapper Brown, Lieut. J. P. Williams (Capt.), and Alan Ding, Khuda Bux, Mohd. Asrar, Lal Singh, Lieut. C. G. Garthwaite and Lieut. Nolan.

An exciting romance by the popular author
WILLIAMS

(FROM WHICH METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER HAS MADE A MOTION PICTURE)

THE STORY THUS FAR

Kay Brannan, late of Wellesley, leaves a solid looking party with Bob Dakin, medical doctor. Motoring her back to Boston he drunkenly insists on marrying her. But when he sobers he remembers Priscilla Hyde, his fiancée. The Dakins are, perfectly kind but Priscilla is in a suit to Kay begs Bob to wait until Spring for divorce. He reluctantly consents but their marriage is to be one "in name only." As the months pass Bob becomes more and more engaged in his medical work. Kay discovers that he is corresponding with Priscilla but wisely refrains from asking questions for now a deep and growing companionship has arisen between herself and Bob. But one afternoon Priscilla called. Kay was not in his room. Kay and Bob have not accepted her invitations. Then Bob walks in.

CHAPTER XXV.

Bob stopped on the threshold, and Priscilla looked at him and he at her; and Kay said quickly: "Dead, tired," he confessed. He explained to Priscilla: "Dr. Fabre has been away these last two weeks, and I'm doing double duty. Got a chance to break away this afternoon, for once." Priscilla had risen, and he took her hand. "Here," said Kay. She handed him a cup of tea. "Bob likes his strong and black as ink," she explained smilingly. "Yes, I know," Priscilla assented, in a dry amusement. Bob sat down on the edge of his chair, precariously. "What you need, Bob, is a cocktail," Priscilla suggested. "You're low!" He grinned. "Is that custom still prevalent?" he asked. Priscilla's brows rose in an amused grimace. "Have you acquired virtue?" she exclaimed. "And—do you find it in its own reward?" "No virtue involved in this," he told her. "I'm doing so much work nowadays I never get a chance to let down." "You ought to make the chance!" "I will, some day," he agreed. "A good old-fashioned boozing might help a lot." He grinned at Kay. "Mean while, another cup of tea, Kay. I'll get a tea bag, anyway." Priscilla looked at her watch. "Stephens should have come for me fifteen minutes ago," she said. "Was he outside when you came in Bob?" He shook his head. "No," he confessed. "If I'd seen your car, I'm afraid I'd have gone to the Clinic." "Why?" she challenged. "Afraid of me?" "Too tired for social amenities," he told her evasively. Kay suggested: "Why don't you run Priscilla home, Bob, if her car doesn't come? I know she's in a hurry." He looked at her, half-startled. "Oh, there's plenty of time," he protested. "I'm sure Stephens will be here soon," Priscilla agreed. But the car did not come, though Bob went twice and thrice to see. The waiting became awkward, and Priscilla suggested at last: "I'll walk! It's only a few blocks. He must have had a flat tyre." Bob looked uncomfortable, and Kay said again: "You take their home, Bob! Dinner won't be ready for an hour, anyway." "I hate making so much trouble," Priscilla insisted. "Stephens is so stupid." Kay smiled at her mockingly. "Bob, you ought not to seem so reluctant," she warned him. "Run along!" In the end, Bob surrendered; and when the thing was decided, he put on a surprising vivacity, laughed in a fashion strange to him of late. Priscilla bade Kay good-bye most graciously. "You're sweet to let Bob take me home," she said. "When he's so tired, I'll send him right back to you." "Why, there isn't the least hurry," Kay assured her. She closed the door behind them, heard their quick voices, their laughter as they descended to the street. She was still standing there when presently she heard other steps returning, ascending the stairs; and her heart began to pound. It might be Bob. But when she opened the door she saw Genevieve. And the other girl looked at Kay, and said with quick amusement: "Heaven's child, you look as though you'd seen a ghost. Am I so terrifying?" "I thought you were Bob!" Kay confessed. Genevieve nodded, her eyes shrewd. "I saw him on the side-walk. With Priscilla." "She called on me," Kay explained. "And her car didn't come for her, so Bob had to take her home." The other seemed about to speak, then held her tongue. She came in and Kay closed the door behind her. "I just dropped in to say howdy," Genevieve explained. "Haven't seen you in a week." She laid aside her coat, and Kay urged: "Your hat, too, Genevieve. Stay." The thin, dark Genevieve demanded a cup. While they sat together, she watched Kay thoughtfully; and Kay saw her scrutiny and said a little breathlessly: "Bob will want to have a visit with you. He'll be here in five minutes or so." But Bob did not come. Instead he telephoned, regretfully. "Kay," he said, "I've got to go to the hospital. An emergency. One of the nurses has an appendix. Don't wait dinner for me." "Oh, Bob, I'm sorry," Kay told him, her appendix wait a little while, and give you time to eat?" But before he could demur she mustered her resolution. "But of course not. I know you have to go. Genevieve's here with me. I'll try to keep her for dinner." "See," Bob agreed. "Do that. Keep her till I come. I haven't seen Gen for a long time." Kay, returning from the telephone, met Genevieve's eyes. She said, with a little laugh: "That's the way with doctors. You never know where they'll be. He has to go operate on a nurse." Genevieve lighted a cigarette. "All right, I'll stay. I accept your invitation, child. We haven't had a good gal time together for months. If you could manage a cocktail, the scene would be complete in every detail." "I'm sorry," Kay confessed. "We haven't anything in the house..." She sat abstractedly, her ears attuned to cheerful conversation. Till the older girl said at last: "Kay, snap out of it! Bob must have had hurry calls before." And: "Of course," Kay agreed. "I know..." They were at dinner, Kay still and white, Genevieve ebulliently cheerful, when the telephone rang again. Kay was on her feet like a flash. "I'll take it, Anna," she told the maid, and darted into the hall. Genevieve, from where she sat, could hear her words. "Hello?" "This is Mrs. Dakin..." "Oh!" A breathless, interminable pause. Then: "Wait a minute, please. I'll give you the number." Genevieve heard the ruffling of paper, and then: "Try Cabot 4323. If he isn't there, call me back. I may be able to locate him for you." When Kay returned to the dining-room, Genevieve met her at the door; and Kay came desperately into her arms. "It was the hospital, wanting Bob," she whispered. "There's an emergency, an embolus. The thing he's been training himself to do..." Genevieve had a deep understanding. "Wait," she urged. "They'll call again in a minute, if they don't locate him." "I gave them Priscilla's number," Kay confessed. "I know, child. I know. But wait..." She waited five minutes, and then ten; but the telephone did not ring again. And suddenly Kay said in weary submission: "He was there!" And her head dropped forward on her crossed arms where she sat at the table, and she wept terribly. Genevieve came to her side. "Please, please, Kay!" she begged. Kay looked up at her, with swimming, tormented eyes. "I can't help it," she sobbed. "Oh, Genevieve, I love him so!" Genevieve, full of a deep sympathy and understanding, stayed with Kay till Bob came home. Kay after a little was composed again. "It's really an awful joke on me!" she confessed. And suddenly Kay said in weary submission: "He was there!" And her head dropped forward on her crossed arms where she sat at the table, and she wept terribly. Genevieve came to her side. "Please, please, Kay!" she begged. Kay looked up at her, with swimming, tormented eyes. "I can't help it," she sobbed. "Oh, Genevieve, I love him so!" Genevieve, full of a deep sympathy and understanding, stayed with Kay till Bob came home. Kay after a little was composed again. "It's really an awful joke on me!" she confessed. "Falling in love with

Bob. But when she opened the door she saw Genevieve. And the other girl looked at Kay, and said with quick amusement: "Heaven's child, you look as though you'd seen a ghost. Am I so terrifying?" "I thought you were Bob!" Kay confessed. Genevieve nodded, her eyes shrewd. "I saw him on the side-walk. With Priscilla." "She called on me," Kay explained. "And her car didn't come for her, so Bob had to take her home." The other seemed about to speak, then held her tongue. She came in and Kay closed the door behind her. "I just dropped in to say howdy," Genevieve explained. "Haven't seen you in a week." She laid aside her coat, and Kay urged: "Your hat, too, Genevieve. Stay." The thin, dark Genevieve demanded a cup. While they sat together, she watched Kay thoughtfully; and Kay saw her scrutiny and said a little breathlessly: "Bob will want to have a visit with you. He'll be here in five minutes or so." But Bob did not come. Instead he telephoned, regretfully. "Kay," he said, "I've got to go to the hospital. An emergency. One of the nurses has an appendix. Don't wait dinner for me." "Oh, Bob, I'm sorry," Kay told him, her appendix wait a little while, and give you time to eat?" But before he could demur she mustered her resolution. "But of course not. I know you have to go. Genevieve's here with me. I'll try to keep her for dinner." "See," Bob agreed. "Do that. Keep her till I come. I haven't seen Gen for a long time." Kay, returning from the telephone, met Genevieve's eyes. She said, with a little laugh: "That's the way with doctors. You never know where they'll be. He has to go operate on a nurse." Genevieve lighted a cigarette. "All right, I'll stay. I accept your invitation, child. We haven't had a good gal time together for months. If you could manage a cocktail, the scene would be complete in every detail." "I'm sorry," Kay confessed. "We haven't anything in the house..." She sat abstractedly, her ears attuned to cheerful conversation. Till the older girl said at last: "Kay, snap out of it! Bob must have had hurry calls before." And: "Of course," Kay agreed. "I know..." They were at dinner, Kay still and white, Genevieve ebulliently cheerful, when the telephone rang again. Kay was on her feet like a flash. "I'll take it, Anna," she told the maid, and darted into the hall. Genevieve, from where she sat, could hear her words. "Hello?" "This is Mrs. Dakin..." "Oh!" A breathless, interminable pause. Then: "Wait a minute

In the old days it was opium. To-day heroin, almost unknown in China as recently as 1928, is one of the commonest drugs used by addicts.

Though the habit of heroin-taking has increased so rapidly, the most determined efforts are being made by the Chinese Government to put an end to the practice. These efforts consist of strong propaganda against drug-taking, the opening of more than 600 treatment centres for addicts up and down the country, and the most stringent laws against drug-smugglers, and addicts who relapse after being discharged from a treatment centre.

Death is often the penalty for smugglers and relapsed addicts—as it is also for farmers who grow the forbidden opium-poppy. This law is administered without respect of persons. A general who was found to be using one of his aeroplanes for drug-smuggling was led away immediately and shot.

The hospitals in Peiping alone admitted 5,500 patients in 10 months—of these only 60 were known later to have relapsed into drug-taking. Of the 60, 20 were finally set free, 30 were given terms of imprisonment, and 10 were simply beheaded.

The authorities reckon that Peiping alone still contains 40,000 drug addicts—more than a quarter of whom are coolies and manual labourers who take to the drug for relief from physical exhaustion.

Other countries cannot claim to have clean hands in respect of China's drug-problem. 20,000 drug-dealers operating in Peiping are Japanese subjects—and the Chinese say that they get no satisfaction from handing them over to the Japanese authorities. Many British vessels, they also state, are engaged in the drug-smuggling business.

BRANDING THE SMUGGLER PENALTY FOR A FIRST OFFENCE

CAUGHT—FOR THE SECOND TIME

The smuggler is taken to one of the 600 centres recently opened for the treatment of drug addicts. Here he is branded on the arm. If he is caught a second time he will be shot. In 1934, 208 death sentences were carried out.

ARREST OF A HEROIN SMUGGLER

Chinese police arrest a heroin smuggler outside the railway station at Peiping. Peiping is said to contain 40,000 addicts, and the most determined efforts are being made to put down the drug traffic.

A branded man has been caught by the police. Though he knows he is going to death he has still enough curiosity to gaze at the photographer. Heroin, now becoming the commonest of drugs, is usually taken in cigarettes, pinches of it being pushed in among the tobacco.

HE WILL SMUGGLE NO MORE

No trial. No pronouncing of death sentence. No "benefit of clergy." A branded man has been found with drugs concealed about him. He is taken away into a field and shot. There is not even a firing squad... no need to waste bullets on a dope smuggler. Right, his turn next.

BANKS AID GERMANY'S SHIPPING

LARGE DEBTS WRITTEN OFF

(Special To "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphische Nachrichten, 1936. Received, March 24, 5 a.m.)
Berlin, March 23.
Plans for the financial reorganisation of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg-Amerika shipping companies will be decided upon at extraordinary general meetings on April 23 and April 24, respectively.
The share capital of the North German Lloyd company will probably be reduced by 42,570,000 marks, and the sum written off with part of the reserve used to balance the company's losses. The capital will then be raised again 46,660,000 marks.
Similarly the capital of the Hamburg-Amerika line is expected to be reduced from 57,570,000 marks to 12,010,000 marks, and then raised back to 46,570,000 marks.
It is believed the creditor banks have written off a considerable part of the capital which the companies owe them, to enable the carrying out of the proposed reorganisation.—Reuter Special.

FLOOD'S MENACE SPREADS

MISSOURI RIVER THREATENS STATES FIGHT EPIDEMICS

(Special To "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphische Nachrichten, 1936. Received, March 24, 11.50 a.m.)
Washington, Mar. 23.
The flood menace has spread to the west, with the Missouri River surmounting its banks and spreading confusion and concern in Omaha. Meanwhile, the situation elsewhere has improved, except in the Ohio Valley, where the crest of the flood is approaching Cincinnati, and has already inundated several smaller, up-river towns.—United Press.

CINCINNATI DANGER
Cincinnati, Mar. 23.
Although the flood waters of the Ohio River threaten damage in this area and in the city itself, the rich downtown area is not believed to be in serious danger as the river's force appears to be almost spent.—United Press.

EPIDEMICS FOLLOW FLOODS
Washington, Mar. 23.
The health forces of fourteen states have mobilised all their resources to halt the incipient epidemics of typhoid, scarlet fever and pneumonia which are breaking out in communities of Maine and Kentucky in the wake of the disastrous floods which have already taken a toll of nearly 200 lives.

All but a few of the flooded rivers are receding from their destructive levels.

The present problem is to feed and house 200,000 refugees, who have lost everything in the floods, and to prevent the spread of disease.

The militia is enforcing quarantines in Connecticut and Pennsylvania. The sale of raw milk is forbidden in Pennsylvania and West Virginia flood areas.

At Wheeling the restaurants have been forbidden to re-open, pending inspections.—United Press.

Queen Mary To Leave Clyde

GIANT NEW LINER'S FIRST JOURNEY

Glasgow, Mar. 23.
The giant liner, Queen Mary, will leave the Clyde to-morrow on a journey of twenty-seven miles down the river.

It is expected that the journey will take three hours, owing to the awkward bends in the river.

The gross tonnage of the liner was officially disclosed to-day for the first time as being 773 tons.

SABOTAGE ON WARSHIP

BOLTS PLACED IN MACHINERY

Plymouth, Mar. 23.
Evidence of sabotage aboard the destroyer Griffin is forthcoming in the announcement that bolts were placed in the induction machinery of the warship recently.

The discovery was made on the Griffin's trial voyage on March 7.—United Press.

FAMOUS ACTOR PASSES

MR. OSCAR ASHE'S NOTABLE CAREER

"CHU CHIN CHOW" AUTHOR

London, Mar. 23.
The death has occurred of Mr. Oscar Ashe, the noted actor-manager.

—Reuter.
Oscar Ashe was born at Geelong, Victoria, Australia, in June, 1872, and was educated at Melbourne Grammar School. A Norwegian by descent he studied for the stage at Oslo (Christiania). His first appearance was made at the Opera Comique, London, in March, 1893, in "Man and Woman." He then joined the Bensons and was with them for eight years playing in Shakespeare and costume comedies. He next played Maldonado in Pinero's "Iris" at the Garrick and was seen at New York in that part in 1902. In that year he joined Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's, appearing in Shakespeare and the close of the year he and his wife Lily Brayton whom he had met and married while with the Bensons, gave a Shakespearean season. In 1907 he moved to His Majesty's where he produced Binyon's "Attila" and Shakespeare.

FIRST EASTERN PLAY
In 1909 he toured in Australia. Returning to London in 1911, he appeared as Hamlet in "Kismet" the first of the Eastern plays which he put on, and it brought a profit of £20,000. In 1912-3 he again visited Australia and then South Africa. On his return in 1914 he revived "Kismet" and in September put on "Mammet" which he had adapted. His first appearance on the variety stage was at New-castle in 1916.

In August 1916, the run began of the spectacular Eastern musical play "Chu Chin Chow" written by himself in which he appeared as Abu Hassan. This piece, which cost £5,300 to produce, employed the world's record run of five years (2,538 performances) and was seen by nearly 3,000,000 people. The takings were over £750,000 and the net profit is said to have been about £200,000, while the film and musical rights were sold for £25,000.

Nevertheless a receiving order was made against him on May 28 1928, for the success which he scored with "Chu Chin Chow" did not attend his later ventures. In 1929 he put on "Fecan" and in 1931 "Cairo" but these had not the drawing power of their predecessor. Other plays including "The Royal Visitor" and "The Good Old Boys" were failures.

At a creditors' meeting on June 25, 1929, his liabilities were estimated at £8,600 and he placed his assets at £20,000 mainly due from Australia and America in respect of various productions. The actor, who was running a farm at Nailsforth, admitted that he usually carried £2,000 about with him.

Ashe was part-author of "Count Hannibal" author of "The Spanish Main" "Eastward Ho!" (with Dorcas Morris, 1919) and "Mecca". In 1917 he produced "The Maid of the Mountains" and in 1920 "The Southern Maid" both at Daly's. In 1926 with Marie Lohr he appeared in "Big Business" the first non-costume drama in which he had played since "Iris".

TOURIST SHIP LEAVING

EMPRESS DEPARTS TO-MORROW

During their stay in Hongkong the passengers aboard the round-the-world cruise liner Empress of Britain which leaves Hongkong at 6 a.m. to-morrow for Shanghai, were divided into two parties and at different times saw everything of interest the Colony had to offer.

The first party went round the New Territories on the afternoon of their arrival, in the evening attending the special dance at the Peninsula Hotel. On Saturday last, they had the morning free and spent the afternoon touring the island in cars. On Sunday the entire day was free for the passengers to explore independently, while on Monday they set out at 8.50 a.m. for Canton and did not return until the evening. To-day they visited the Peak by car in the morning and had the afternoon free. For the other party the same programme was arranged but on different days.

Shops which cater for the Empress of Britain passengers state that the trade this year was good but probably not quite up to average, the tourists, as last year, spending carefully rather than lavishly.
